Shreveport Region Worst Hit; 7 Die At Air Force Depot; 146 Are Injured

Shreveport, La., Feb. 12 (U.P.).—An epidemic of killer tornadoes rambled across more than 150 miles of rain-soaked east Texas and northwest Louisiana today, splintering houses, heaving over trees and smokestacks and toppling oil derricks.

State police in Louisiana and official sources in Texas reported a total of 35 killed and 146 injured. Of these, 29 were reported killed and 81 injured in Louisiana; 6 killed and 65 injured in Texas.

At least 10 of the injured, State police said, were not expected to live. They explained that they revised their casualty total from a higher figure because reports from undertakers and from stricken towns had caused a few duplications.

Rescuers Work in Rain

A cold rain fell on the ruins of homes in four Louisiana parishes tonight and grim rescue workers were going through tumbled piles of planks, timbers and bricks by the light of searchlights.

The revised Louisiana State police casualty list was:

Forbing-Cedar Grove-Slack Air Depot—Seven killed, 20 injured.

Sligo—Five killed, 15 injured.

Castor-Jamestown-Albert area of Bienville Parish — Nine killed, seven injured.

Grand Cane-Longstreet area, 45 miles southwest of Shreveport—Two killed, 19 injured.

Curtis—Three killed, injured undetermined.

Three Texans were killed in Haslam, Tex., just across the Louisiana line from Logansport, La. A woman was killed at Jericho, Tex., another at Corley, Tex., and an 18-month-old boy at Salem community, near Lufkin, Tex.

Started in Gulf Region

The tornado epidemic started Saturday in the Texas Gulf Coast region, where Mrs. Ella Dodson, a 101-year-old former slave, was killed. It reached as far north as Mount Holly, Ark., just north of the Louisiana line. At Mount Holly, it destroyed one home, damaged another, and demolished three oil well rigs. But no injuries were reported in Arkansas.

Two Memorial Rites in Honor of Lincoln Held on 141st Anniversary of His Birth

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

President Truman and others yesterday joined in honoring Abraham Lincoln, the man who rose from rail-splitter to President.

The 141st anniversary of the Civil War President's birth was observed in impressive noon rites on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, wtih President Truman and representatives of more than two-score patriotic organizations participating under the auspices of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

Contingents from the Air Force, participating for the first time, Navy, Army and Marine Corps, forming a guard of honor, formed a passage up the great flight of marble steps to the entrance of the memorial.

Flanking the honor guard at the head of the stairs was the Marine Band at one side, and the massed colors of the participtaing organitions on the other.

As Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, III, grandson of the Civil War general who became President, and later Rear Admiral Reginald Belknap of Philadelphia read their names, the organizations advanced with their wreaths.

Grant, as commander of the Loyal Legion's District commandery, and Belknap, as national commander-in-chief, served as masters of ceremony.

Climax of the program came with the arrival from Blair House of President and Mrs. Truman at 12:30 p. m.

Federal Tax Figure Drops $1.8 Billion

Personal Income Payments Are Down 12 Pct.; Corporation Total Is Above 1948

By the United Press

Federal Internal Revenue collections slumped $1,800,000,000 in calendar 1949, chiefly because of a whopping 12 percent drop in personal income tax payments, the Treasury Department reported yesterday.

In a year-end summary, it said 1949 collections totaled $40,501,870,605, a drop of 4¼ percent from the $42,302,864,105 reported in calendar 1948.

Internal Revenue taxes yield most of the Government's income, excluding only such items as customs receipts and sales of Government property. Officials said the reduced collections reflected the full impact of the 1948 tax cut and a gradual slowdown in the economy.

Corporation Taxes Up

Personal income tax payments, which had been yielding about half the Nation's total income, fell to $17,752,414,084, compared with $20,281,564,081 in 1948.

The GOP-controlled Eightieth Congress cut taxes in 1948, but the reductions were effective only for the last six months of that year. They were in effect all of 1949 which, officials said, was the biggest single reason for the sharp drop.

Corporation taxes, the second largest source of Federal revenue, went up. They totaled $11,851,444,106, compared with the $10,928,910,030 paid in by business and industry the previous year.

This stems from the fact that corporations last year set aside less money for capital improvements. Thus increasing their tax liability.

From Other Sources

Other 1949 tax collections included:

Employment taxes—$2,459,700,000, off six million dollars.

Alcohol—$2,204,300,000, up 28 million dollars.

Tobacco — $1,319,976,501, up eight million dollars.

Stamp taxes (playing cards, bonds, deeds)—$71,970,000, off five million dollars.

Miscellaneous — $1,711,021,478, off 16 million dollars.

President Truman has been pressing Congress to "plug" tax loopholes and raise corporation taxes enough to permit a 695-million-dollar slash in wartime excises and still increase over-all revenues one billion dollars a year.

Congressional sources say the House is almost sure to reduce excises by one billion dollars, and perhaps as much as $1,250,000,000. Since there is little congressional sentiment for tax increases, revenues may fall off even more this year.

Slump In Excises Taxes

The Treasury report seemed to substantiate retailer complaints that excise taxes are hurting business because the customer must pay the tax.

Receipts from furs, jewelry, luggage and cosmetics were only $425,518,349 compared with $463,391,250 in 1948, despite a slight gain in cosmetics taxes.

The report also showed corporation taxes topped personal income taxes in four States—Delaware, Michigan, and the two Carolinas.

Miners Ignore Orders To Begin Work Today Without a Contract

Thousands Fail To Report at Pits In West Virginia And Pennsylvania

Pittsburgh, Feb. 13 (Monday) (AP).—Reports from the soft coal fields today showed striking miners ignoring orders of a Federal Court and John L. Lewis that they return to work.

There is a strong indication that a majority of the 370,000 idle diggers will remain on strike as whistles blow for early morning shifts.

Overnight crews failed to report at six West Virginia mines employing a total of 4690 miners.

Only two mines in western and central Pennsylvania had overnight shifts scheduled. Both pits, employing 1500 diggers were closed tight.

"The men just failed to show up," said one operator spokesman, again."

No Contract, No Work

During the weekend, presidents of three United Mine Workers' locals in Pennsylvania, two in West Virginia and Ohio and one in Illinois expressed this view:

"Nothing short of a contract will make the diggers produce coal again.

Mings in those four States employ 250,000 of the 370,000 strikers.

Scattered comment from rebellious miners could be summed up this way:

"We're not working without a contract."

A top coal industry source declared:

"It appears like a complete strike."

Lewis wired district UMW officials to direct the 370,000 striking miners to "cease their strike forthwith" in compliance with a U. S. Court order.

Fires Both Barrels

The Government fired a double-barreled legal blast at the union in an effort to halt the crippling 6-week-old "no contract no work" strike.

These swift moves came under the Taft-Hartley law:

1. The President's fact-finding board said an immediate resumption of coal digging is "imperative" to protect the national health and safety.

2. President Truman asked for an injunction ordering the miners back to work.

3. Federal District Judge Richmond B. Keech issued a 10-day temporary order, for Lewis and his miners to resume digging coal. He also set a hearing for February 20 to determine whether the directive should be continued for the full 80 days provided by the Taft-Hartley law.

4. Keech signed an order directing Lewis and his union to drop four major demands in negotiations with operators for a new contract. The order was requested by NLRB General Counsel Robert N. Denham. He acted at request of major operators who charged Lewis with unfair labor practices.

5. Keech directed Lewis to resume bargaining in good faith. Lewis immediately invited major operators to sit down with him Wednesday. They accepted.

The Government acted as the Einstein Fears Hydrogen Bomb Might Annihilate 'Any Life'

New York, Feb. 12 (AP).—Prof. Albert Einstein said today that if the H-bomb is developed "annihilation of any life on earth" is "within the range of technical possibilities."

It could be done, he said, through "radioactive poisoning of the atmosphere."

Einstein called the present armament race between the United States and Russia "a disastrous illusion" and called for peace moves to "do away with mutual fear and distrust."

He said a "supranational" body would be necessary to carry out nonviolent aims and that international control of weapons would be only "of secondary use as a police measure."

"It may be wise not to overestimate its importance," he said "The times of prohibition come to mind and give one pause."

Einstein's statement was part of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's first television show over the NBC network.

He did not appear personally, but a specially made film of the famed mathematician, in which he made his statement, was shown on the telecast.

Other guests of Mrs. Roosevelt included Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, president of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton; David Lilienthal, retiring chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission and Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy.

Einstein said the fact that the United States first produced the atomic bomb had fostered the illusion that this country could

Russia Charges West Broke Up A-Curb Talks

Soviet U. N. Delegate Says Red China Dispute Collapsed Conferences

London, Feb. 12 (U.P.).—Russia's United Nations delegate, Jacob Malik, blamed the West today for the collapse of talks on control of atomic energy at Lake Success on January 19.

Malik said the real reason for the breakdown of these discussions was the refusal of the Western powers to bar the Chinese Nationalist delegate, whom Russia does not recognize, from the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission. This, he said, "obliged" the USSR representatives to walk out of the commission on January 19.

Malik made his charge in a formal letter to Trygve Lie, United Nations Secretary General, which was broadcast by the Moscow radio early this morning and distributed by the Soviet monitor here.

The Russian delegate said the Western nations "incorrectly" stated that the Soviet Union's attitude was responsible for breaking up of the talks three weeks ago.

However, the letter to Lie from the United States, Britain, France and Canada two weeks ago simply reported the suspension of atomic energy control talks because of the dispute which arose over Chinese representation. The letter added that members of the General

Atom-Sub Race May Interfere With H-Bomb

Most Joint Committee Members Back Priority For Submersibles

By The Associated Press

A race between the United States and Russia to be first to build an atomic-powered submarine is a possibility that may complicate efforts to produce the hydrogen bomb, informed lawmakers said yesterday.

This question is known to have been discussed by the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee. Indications are members generally favor giving the naval development every possible priority short of stopping actual work on the H-bomb project.

Their argument is that the H-bomb may take a long time to perfect. In fact, some scientists have said it may never be perfected, although most of them apparently think it will be.

Because development of the H-bomb will draw on atomic weapon-making resources, some legislators say they regard as critical the question of which phase will command top efforts.

Legislators believe that a nuclear-engine submarine might well revolutionize naval warfare.

The advantage of a nuclear engine submarine would lie in the fact that it would have an almost unlimited range of action, could go deeper in the ocean and stay down longer than even the most modern type of submersible.

The supposition among lawmakers is that if such a submarine were built, it would contain its own relatively small atomic pile, eliminating much heavy fuel and machinery.

The newest of submarines, which American military officials say the Russians have built in quantity from captured German models, already present a threat providing problems in adequate defense.

Dr. Vannevar Bush, a top wartime military consultant, was reported to have told members of the Senate Armed Service Committee last week that torpedoes with homing fuses now can be fired at a maximum range of about seven miles.

Iraq Police Head Held After 2-Hour Revolt Attempt

Bagdad, Iraq, Feb. 12 (AP).—Ali Khalid, director general of Iraq police, attempted to overthrow the government today but was arrested within two hours, reliable sources reported. There was no bloodshed.

A communique said "his movement was foiled immediately. He has been arrested in preparation for his trial."

The communique said the cabinet had decided to transfer Ali Khalid from his post, and "under the influence of this decision he began using force to disturb the peace and order."

Spud-Running Swamps U. S. Border Force

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Uncle Sam's liberal price supports for farm commodities are bringing headaches to the Customs Bureau.

Potato smuggling from Canada into Aroostook County, Maine, has become too great for the force at the Portland, Me., customs office to handle, customs chiefs said last night. More agents are to be sent into the region. Top officials hope to get the border-running under control by fall.

Frank Dow, Commissioner of Customs, and his assistant, David B. Strubinger, recently told Congress that potatoes have replaced diamonds as the chief commodity smuggled from Canada.

Last year hundreds of thousands of bushels were smuggled into Aroostook County. Agents seized scores of loaded trucks. Some smugglers carried bundles of sacks with American brand names on them, ready to resack their loads before selling them to United States Government buyers.

Most of the potatoes are sold to the Government under the price-support program as Maine-grown spuds. The Agriculture Department, by Congress' order, pays about twice as much for surplus potatoes as they bring in the Canadian market.

Agents of the Portland Customs Office are watching "a lot of potatoes adjacent to the border now," Strubinger told The Washington Post last night.

Dow told a House Appropriations subcommittee at a closed session recently that "the smuggling of diamonds and other jewels and jewelry continues on a relatively high level at seaports and airports of entry. It is believed that this type of smuggling is being reasonably well controlled.

State Dept. Again Seeks Press Seats

By David McConnell
NYHT News Service

A State Department move to reopen the fight to have two of its newsgatherers admitted to the House and Senate press galleries brought opposition yesterday from a large segment of Washington's working press.

The Standing Committee of Correspondents which controls applications to the press gallery has scheduled public hearings on the new request for Wednesday night. The rulings of the five-member committee, which last October 28 rejected a similar application, can be appealed to the Senate Rules Committee which, with the Speaker of the House, passes on gallery regulations.

The State Department's representatives now have facilities in the adjacent periodical galleries

Yale Chooses Its Prof. Griswold As President

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 12 (U.P.).—Prof. Alfred Whitney Griswold, 43, will become the sixteenth president of Yale University, it was announced today.

The youthful-looking history professor will assume his new post July 1, succeeding Charles Seymour, Yale president for the past 13 years.

Griswold was born in Morristown, N. J., in 1906. He joined the Yale faculty in 1929.

He worked with the Army training program at Yale during the war and is the author of several books. (Picture on Page 4)

State Outlays Have Doubled, Census Says

By The Associated Press

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that spending by State governments doubled in the first four postwar years.

It calculated 1949 State expenditures at approximately 12 billion dollars, compared with "less than six billion dollars annually before 1946."

That trend, the bureau said, was manifested in 1949 data on the first 28 States for which comparative figures have been compiled. The 28 spent about one sixth more in 1949 than the year before.

"A considerable part of the postwar increase in States' spending reflects their effort to 'catch up' on highway construction and other capital outlays which were substantially postponed during the war," the bureau said.

"Judging by trends for the first 28 States reported, total State (capital) outlays in 1949 approached two billion dollars—as much as for the entire five-year period of fiscal 1942 through 1946. About three fourths of all capital outlay expenditure for States is for highway purposes."

Another cause of increased State spending was a rapid upswing in State aid to local governments—from $1,838,000,000 in 1945 probably to over $3,600,000,000 in 1949." Aid for local schools takes up nearly half the total amount.

The bureau said the 28 States on which it had detailed data spent an average of nearly $74 a person

'Tool' for Party Purges

Reds Will Card-Index Politics Of 17 Million East Germans

Berlin, Feb. 12 (AP).—The Communists are going to build a master card-index file showing the political history of every one of the 17 million persons in eastern Germany, it was announced today.

The mammoth political dossier may be valuable to the new Red Gestapo, authorized by the Volkskammer (People's Chamber) last week, in keeping a tab on all eastern Germans. It also would be useful in conducting periodic purges of "unreliables" from party and governing jobs in eastern Germany.

Herbert Warnke, state secretary of the interior ministry in the East German Communist Republic, announced the task in an interview in National Zeitung, the Soviet zone newspaper published for former members of the Nazi party.

The purpose of the interview was to assure former Nazis they are welcome in the "National Front"—a coalition of all parties tolerated in the eastern zone—if they follow Communist leadership.

Warnke said the gigantic file will be obtained by issuing a new questionnaire to the entire population. He declared:

"Everyone must answer the new 'personal sheet' truthfully.

"We must know the beginning and the end of a person's membership in political parties and organizations. It is immaterial whether it is the SPD (Socialist), KPD (Communist), CDU (Christian Democrat), LDP (Liberal Democrat) or NDAP (Nazi)."

The new political census replaces a former questionnaire that Germans were required to fill out by all four occupying powers immediately after the war. The old questionnaire only sought to establish whether a person had been a member of the Nazi party, and for how long. The new sheet pins down all the other political faiths that a German may have entertained.

Western observers considered the move one of the most far-reaching yet taken by the East German Communist government to entrench itself in power and guard itself against even incipient opposition.

Germans who call themselves Communists today may have to explain why they were Christian Democrats or Liberal Democrats a few years ago.

The Communists often accuse some persons with such political antecedents of being opportunists.

Churchill Offers Blueprint, Draws Barrage From Labor

London, Feb. 12 (AP).—Winston Churchill tossed a seven-point "blueprint for the future" into Britain's political campaign today.

The Conservative leader, fighting to overturn the Labor government in the balloting February 23, made proposals ranging from a closer-knit British Commonwealth of Nations to growing more food at home.

The Labor counterblast was: Conservatives have had opportunities before the war to carry out their laudable projects; the voters should judge the Conservatives "not by their promises but by their record."

Churchill's program was published in a leaflet distributed widely throughout the country.

This was the way he said "we can once more take our proud place in the vanguard of free nations":

"We must have a government that will—

"1. Show resolute leadership and tell the people the truth, seeking to unite all sections of the people in a national effort.

"2. Bring about a closer relationship between us and the countries of the British Empire and Commonwealth.

"3. Take practical action to increase production and lower the cost of living.

"4. Reduce government spending and cut out all waste.

"5. Lower taxation to encourage everybody to try and help them to save.

"6. Give people a chance to make the most of their lives—give them opportunities rather than regulations.

Crime Broadcast Leads to Arrest of Richmond Felon

St. Louis, Feb. 12 (U.P.).—A crime-doesn't-pay radio broadcast last night led to the arrest of a 1946 Richmond, Va., prison fugitive.

Police said that an acquaintance of Emmit Curtis Keeble heard the broadcast—describing the fugitive as having five tatooed F's on his forearm and a scar on his face—and notified them.

Keeble, who waived extradition, is waiting for Virginia authorities to arrive and take him back to Richmond to serve the remainder of an 8-year sentence for armed robbery.

Fleet Going 'High-Hat'

NYHT News Service

President Truman's new super-special, custom-built, oversize Lincoln limousine—first of a fleet of 10 beting built for lease to the White House—reached Washington unheralded late yesterday under tarpaulin wraps.

The big new car, with gold-plated fittings in the rear compartment, special running boards for Secret Service men and a shiny, padded leather top with sufficient headroom for high silk hats, was trucked to the Esso Capital Service Center, Standard Oil Co. headquarters near the Capitol. There it was unveiled in the presence of a small group of lucky witnesses, moved into the big garage and re-covered for the night.

A glimpse from a slight distance into the President's compartment showed that, while the car was not, as expected, a convertible, it did have the special jump seats and luxurious fittings that had been forecast, with all of the interior hardware gold-plated, including the controls for the automatic windows on the sides and between the driver's and passengers' compartments. Separate radio and heater equipment for both compartments was observed.

The boards along the sides for the Secret Service men who guard the President on state occasions were equipped with red running lights and special red lights were installed in the front. It gave every appearance of having the predicted 145-inch wheelbase, which compares with the 125-inch base of the largest ready-made Linclon Cosmopolitan, and the 6000-pound weight, which is 1600 pounds

Two AEC Officers Killed in Crash On Secret Flight

Albuquerque, N. M., Feb. 12 (U.P.).—Two security officers of the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission and their pilot were killed last night when their plane crashed and burned while coming in for a landing through overcast skies.

The twin-engine Beechcraft, a Carco Airlines plane under contract to the AEC, crashed in rolling hill country 4½ miles from West Mesa Airport at Albuquerque.

The victims were Robert Purcell and Warren Fleshman, AEC security officers who lived in Los Alamos, N. M., and Hugh Williams, jr., of Albuquerque, the pilot.

Elmo Morgan, assistant manager of the AEC Santa Fe operating office at Los Alamos, said the plane was carrying "classified information" on the flight from the East.

McCarthy Names 4, Hedges on Charges

Reno, Feb. 12 (AP). — Senator Joseph McCarthy (R., Wis.), who claims the State Department has at least 57 card-carrying Communists on its payroll, has named names—four of them.

But after he had mentioned four names in a speech here, and after references to "traitorous actions" by Government employes, McCarthy said he was not calling any of the four a traitor or a Communist.

Instead, he said, he should have called them "specific cases of people with Communist connections."

During a Lincoln Day talk at a dinner of Nevada Republicans last night, McCarthy said this country had failed to grasp its opportunities to become a world leader at the end of the war.

This, he said, was "because of the traitorous actions of those who have been treated so well by this Nation . . .

Assails State Department

"This is glaringly true in the State Department. There the bright young men who were born with silver spoons in their mouths are the ones who have been most traitorous.

"Now I know it is very easy for anyone to condemn a particular bureau or department in general terms. Therefore, I would like to cite some specific cases.

"When Chiang Kai-shek was fighting our war, the State Department had in China a young man named John W. Service. He sent back to Washington reports urging that 'communism was the only hope of China.'

"Two days after Dean Acheson took over as Undersecretary of State, this man, John Service . . . was not only reinstated in the State Department, but promoted . . . and finally, under Acheson, placed in charge of all placements and promotions.

"Today, this man Service is on his way to represent the State Department and Acheson in Calcutta —by far and away the most important listening post in the Far East."

(State Department records show no John W. Service, but John Stewart Service now is reported en route to Calcutta as consul. He has been named at congressional hearings as favoring the United States' dealing with Communist China.

(John Stewart Service, born in Chengtu, China, of American parents, is a longtime foreign service officer and served as acting foreign policy adviser to Gen. Douglas MacArthur in Japan in 1945.

(His name was mentioned officially in Congress when an investigation was made of confidential Government information that appeared in the magazine Amerasia. Three persons were indicted on conspiracy charges. No action was taken aaginst Service.)

Brings Up Second Name

Then McCarthy brought up the name of Gustave Duran and continued:

"Duran was made assistant to the Assistant Secretary of State in charge of Latin American affairs. He was taken into the State Department from his job as a lieutenant colonel in the Communist International Brigade.

"Finally after intense congressional pressure and criticism he resigned in 1946 from the State Department. And where do you think he is now?

"He took over a high-salaried job as chief of the cultural activities section in the office of the assistant secretary general of the United Nations."

(At Old Westbury, N. Y., Duran said that "I am not now, nor never have been, a Communist or a Communist sympathizer.)

(He said the charge of having Communist sympathies was first made against him five years ago by J. Parnell Thomas, former congressman and former chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

(An FBI investigation, he said, cleared him completely. Duran added that at the request of his wife, who comes from New Hampshire, Senator Styles Bridges (R. N. H.) also made an investigation and that Bridges found "absolutely no grounds" for the accusation.

(Duran, a Spanish-born naturalized citizen, said today he was a lieutenant colonel not in the International Brigade, but in the legal Spanish Republican army, commanding about 50,000 men, all of them Spaniards.")

Alleges "Courier" Charge

McCarthy next mentioned Mrs. Mary Jane Keeney, saying she was "with the Board of Economic Warfare in the State Department."

He said Mrs. Keeney "was named in an FBI report and a House committee report as a courier for the Communist Party while working for the Government.

"And where do you think Mrs. Mary Keeney is?" he asked. "She is now editor in the United Nations Document Bureau."

(Mrs. Keeney, 51, is employed in the documents center at the U. N., the section that types and distributes press releases, texts of resolutions, and other such material.

(Last July 25 a report by the House Un-American Activities Committee said she once acted as a courier for the Communist Party while working for the United States Government in France.

(She denied she had acted as a Communist courier and said under oath that "I am not and never have been a member of the Communist Party."

(The committee report charged she was seen to pass a large manila envelope to a man suspected of Soviet espionage when she returned from a trip to Europe on March 9, 1946.

(Mrs. Keeney said the envelope contained a volume of French underground resistance literature and that the incident was "wholly innocent and trivial."

(She resigned from the State Department in July, 1946.)

McCarthy's fourth name was that of Dr. Harlow Shapley, whom he identified as "former director" of the Harvard Observatory.

McCarthy said Shapley headed a peace conference branded by President Truman as a "tool of Russia." He said the astronomer later was sent by Secretary of State Acheson to be his representative on the United Nations Economic and Social Council.

(Shapley has been head of the Harvard Observatory since 1921 and still is. He was chairman of a peace conference in New York in March, 1949, sponsored by the National Council of the Arts, Sciences and Professions. It was attended by delegations from eastern Europe and was described by the State Department as a sounding board for Russian propaganda.

(Shapley said in New York that McCarthy's charges were "a complete absurdity and a slanderous lie. It is an irresponsible slander of a type that brings disgrace to the Senate of which he is a member."

(He said he had "never held a State Department position.")

After the talk, a reporter asked McCarthy if, as the text of his speech indicated, he had called these four people traitors.

"I did not," he said. "And you will notice I didn't call them Communists, either."

He added:

"I don't care if these people sue me. It might give me a platform from which to expose them."

of the House and Senate. Advocates of the department application have argued that they must get news for its overseas information service, Wireless Bulletin, as rapidly as possible while opponents stress that department reporters should have no trouble setting up telephone or teletype facilities in separate quarters.

Those against the application admitting State Department employes to the galleries fear:

1. That it would open the doors for an influx of publicity personnel employed by every agency and department in the Government.

2. That once representatives of Government departments were admitted it is possible that they might receive instructions to devote time to pressuring reporters in an attempt to get slanted news reports.

3. That Government agencies might be tempted to make use of the prestige of press gallery accreditation in free press publications.

B. M. McKelway, editor of the Washington Star, and James Russel Wiggins, managing editor of The Washington Post, both suggested yesterday that if necessary a separate Government press gallery could be set up.

McKelway, president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, said he is "strongly opposed" to the department's application.

Wiggins said the working press would be "in a much better position" if the Associated Press, United Press and International News Service would make available their reports for the State Department's overseas service. He said he "would like to see the Government stay out of any newsgathering" but stressed that the attitude of the wire services had forced the State Department to set up its own staff of newsgatherers.

The State Department service is used by as many as 10,000 publications throughout the world. The department says it does not compete with private news agencies.

It was stressed by reporters stationed in Washington that recent White House press conferences have demonstrated how representatives from Government agencies can hamper the working press. Up to 20 agency observers usually attend the conferences and recently have taken to pressing to the choice positions near the President.

There is a similar space problem in the Senate and House press galleries. Eighty-six press seats are available in the House and 91 in the Senate. The main qualification for accreditation is that applicants must be "bona fide correspondents" and obtain the major part of their income from daily newspaper work.

Irish Vets Lay That Wreath Despite Cassidy's Warning

Irish War Veterans Post No. 17, despite National Commander George L. Cassidy's warning not to do it, calmly joined other patriotic organizations laying wreaths at the Lincoln Memorial in yesterday's ceremonies.

Cassidy had threatened court action if the post, with which he is on the outs, laid a wreath or holds an announced St. Patrick's Day dance at Wardman Park Hotel. He said if there was any wreath-laying he, or his aide, would do it.

Yesterday Post 17's name was on the roll of organizations laying wreaths.

Cassidy's was not.

As Post Commander Charles J. McAuliffe and Joseph F. Murphy, captain of the post's color guard, advanced in their Erin-green uniforms with a wreath, the master of ceremonies said significantly:

"I'd like to mention that if anyone has a wreath—and whose name has not been called—to bring it to me and give his name as he goes past, so I may announce it."

There didn't seem to be anyone.

Afterward post Vice Commander W. D. Braswell, chairman of the dance, said the St. Patrick's affair is going ahead as scheduled.

in reverent silence as Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, military aide, and Brig. Gen. Robert B. Landry, Air Force aide to the President, took the President's wreath of Fulton gladioli and Baker fern to the entrance of the temple containing Daniel French's great statue of Lincoln.

485 At Ford's

A record 485 persons attended the program yesterday afternoon at Ford's Theater, where Lincoln was assassinated in 1865. Chief speaker at the program in the theater, now the Lincoln Museum under the National Park Service, was Ralph G. Lindstrom, Los Angeles attorney and Lincoln student.

Featuring the program was the presentation to the museum of a bronzed plaster cast of a Lincoln bust, after a work by Leonard Volk, and a photograph of a reenacted scene of Mathew B. Brady taking Lincoln's picture at Antietam.

The bust was presented by the Eloy Alfaro International Foundation, an organization with headquarters in the city of Panama and named for a martyred former president of Ecuador inspired by Lincoln's idealism.

Representative Clyde Doyle of California was chairman of the Lincoln Museum program, in which the United States Army Band chorus participated. The Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, Senate chaplain, gave the benediction.

Lincoln's birthday will be observed as a legal holiday today in Maryland, where State offices, schools and banks will be closed. Prince Georges County offices will be closed, but Montgomery County offices will be open.

The day is not being observed as a holiday in the District nor in Virginia.

Virginia GOP Official Assails Fair Dealers

Talmage Wilcher, Virginia State Republican committeeman, said today the Truman Fair Deal Administration is taking the American people down the road of ruin.

"In a Lincoln Day address over Station WEAM, Wilcher termed the "cradle to the grave" security programs economic fallacies and socialistic.

Wilcher said Lincoln and Jefferson had the same philosophy on government and called on Jeffersonian Democrats to divorce themselves from the New Dealers, Fair Dealers and "fellow travelers of a socialism which is alien to Americanism."

Church Thrives In Red China, Minister Says

Christian churches in Communist China are thriving, an Orient-bound Methodist missionary said yesterday.

Dr. J. Harry Haines, who has spent seven years in China, said that not only were Christian churches unmolested under the Red regime, but in one area alone, at Fukien south of Shanghai, eight new Methodist churches have been opened in the last six months.

The Rev. Mr. Hanes, who is ending a year's home leave here, spoke to a congregation of 300 at Trinity Methodist Church in Alexandria yesterday. He told them there are approximately 1000 Protestant missionaries in China; including 150 sponsored by the Methodist Board of Missions.

Recent reports indicate that attendance is heavy at all Protestant churches throughout China, Dr. Haines added, observing that in recent weeks consent has been given for the arrival in Peiping of additional missionaries.

He said 13 colleges throughout China jointly sponsored by Protestant churches before and during the war are still open and have large voluntary enrollments in religious training courses.

Denouncing communism as a force that "would destroy the dignity and value of the individual," Dr. Haines declared: "The battle for Asia today is the struggle to control men's minds."

heavier than its closest brethren in this class of automobiles.

Capital Service Center attendants gave no inkling as to when the new limousine would be delivered to the White House, but it was assumed that, after inspection, it would be incorporated quickly into the President's automotive fleet. Also, it was assumed, the nine other units of the new fleet would be delivered soon.

Rotation Rental System

The 10 new cars, all oversize and specially equipped, were ordered custom-built at the Henny Motor Co. plant in Freeport, Ill., under the direction of the Ford Motor Co. They will be leased to the Government under a special arrangement by which the White House rotates rental of the President's official cars among the leading manufacturers. All will meet the uncommon requirement of providing headroom for high silk hats, which are essential on state occasions, and the two folding seats in the passenger compartment, plus other special conveniences, many of which were thought up by Ford engineers and designers without suggestions from the White House.

Eight of this fleet of cars are regularly assigned to members of the presidential staff—the other two being reserved for the President and his Secret Service escort —but are available for general White House use. They are housed and maintained in the White House garage and maintained by White House chauffeurs. As the new cars are delivered—probably a week or two apart—units of the old fleet, which has been in use for 12 years, will be retired. The competing manufacturers are so eager to gain the White House prestige for their products that officials have left the impression that the rental costs are meager in relation to the commercial value of the big automobiles.

VA Program for Education Of GIs Branded as 'Waste'

The Veterans' Administration was blamed yesterday for a "tremendous waste" of the taxpayers' money through "maladministration" of the GI education and training program.

The charges were made by the National Association of Private Schools in a special report which called the GI training situation "a disgrace" to the VA and to good government.

The report resulted from a survey of 600 private vocational schools the association represents. These are doing a creditable job, according to the report, despite the fact that 56 percent of them reported "constant harassment" by the VA.

The association recommends the educational and training program under the GI bill should be administered by the various State boards of education, under coordination of a new Federal board with the U. S. Commissioner of Education as chairman. The VA would handle only eligibility, cases records and payments.

Kroger Income for '49 Listed as $13,636,564

Cincinnati, Feb. 12 (AP). — The Kroger Co. today reported a net income of $13,636,564 for 1949 equal to $7.42 a share on outstanding stock.

President Joseph B. Hall said the earnings compared to profit of $11,811,120 or $6.43 a share in 1948.

State Outlays Have Doubled in 1949 compared with $64 in 1948.

The $74 average for 1949 was broken down as: operation $30.85; capital outlay $13.86; aid to local governments $21.01; contributions to trust funds and enterprises $6.07; interest on debts 39 cents; provision for debt retirement $1.34; total $73.51.

State revenues were reported at a new record high last year along with expenditures. The 28 States reporting showed an increase of 13 percent in revenue collections in 1949 compared with 1948.

On a per person average, receipts were: taxes $52.66; aid from other governments, mainly Federal grants, $13.35; charges and miscellaneous $6.34; total $72.35.

In addition, the 28 States borrowed the equivalent of $2.12 for each person in their populations, the bureau said.

To Plan Cub Scouting

Man Takes Guns With Flower Gift, Kills Wife, Son

New York, Feb. 12 (U.P.)—A young father who carried a box of Valentine flowers and two revolvers to a rendezvous with his estranged wife shot and killed her and their 18-month-old son today in a Children's Society shelter.

Police said the father, 33-year-old Murray Goldberg, fled after the double slaying, leaving the flowers and revolvers behind him.

Goldberg and his wife, Estelle, 30, who had been separated for two months, had been in the shelter almost two hours when Raymond Creighton, the agent in charge, heard two shots.

Creighton found the Goldberg's son, Kenneth, dead and Mrs. Goldberg fatally wounded.

Ernst Named Defender In Vogeler 'Spy' Trial

New York, Feb. 12 (NYHT).—Morris L. Ernst, New York attorney, has been retained as defense counsel for Robert A. Vogeler, assistant vice president of International Telephone & Telegraph Co., now facing trial in Hungary on charges of espionage, it was announced today.

Ernst has applied for a visa to enter Hungary immediately to be present at the opening session of the trial, tentatively scheduled for February 17, his office disclosed.

U. S.-Canada Troops Set for Yukon 'War'

Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, Feb. 12 (U.P.).—The icy tundra around this little town is teeming with armed men. The town is seething with excitement.

American and Canadian troops assembled here are ready to begin the biggest war games ever played in the sub-Arctic regions of the American continent in midwinter. The maneuvers, with the code name "Sweetbrier," will be the first joint troop training exercises of their kind ever undertaken by the United States and Canada.

More than 5200 men have poured in by air and over the frozen Alaskan Highway. Whitehorse, population 3500, has seldom seen so much excitement or so many people since the gold rush of the 1890s.

It was 12 below zero yesterday when eight newspaper correspondents landed here in an Air Force plane, and that's warm for Whitehorse. It was 55 below zero here a few days ago.

Preparations for these maneuvers have been going on for a year. Last summer a lot of the material was stored here. The men have been assembling for months. A battalion of 750 men was flown in from Camp Carson, Col., fully armed and equipped, ready for battle. Their flight was 2600 miles—said to be the longest airlift of fully armed men ever accomplished.

Two thousand more men from Camp Carson came up in convoys on the Alaskan Highway, a trip of 3000 miles.

For the past week the forces have been engaging in Arctic training. One stunt was a 12-mile march on snowshoes and skies when the temperature was more than 50 below.

The exercises are under the command of Lieut. Gen Stephen J. Chamberlain, commanding general of the U. S. Army.

Caribbean War Probers Head for Washington

Guatemala City, Feb. 12 (U.P.).—The five-nation commission investigating threats of war in the Caribbean area announced today that it has completed its survey and will leave Monday for Washington to prepare a report to the Organization of American States (Pan-American Union).

The commission visited Haiti, Dominican Republic, Cuba and Guatemala in its study of recurring charges and counter-charges about war threats in Central America. On the way back to Washington, the commissioners will stop off in Mexico for a "courtesy visit."

40 Hurt in Red Clash

Toulon, France, Feb. 12 (U.P.).—Forty persons were injured today when Communist-led union members, armed with truncheons, blackjacks and stones, charged a police barrier here during a labor demonstration.

10 Missing as Ship Sinks

Den Helder, the Netherlands, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—The 2214-ton Finnish Freighter Karhula sank off the Dutch coast today. Lifeboats rescued 16 crew members and two stowaways, but 10 crewmen are missing.

U. S. Will Open Secret Parley On Asia Today

Bangkok, Thailand (Siam), Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Seventeen American diplomats will begin a secret three-day conference Monday on the tumultuous problems of Asia.

They will seek means of strengthening United States policies in an area that is already half Red and half undecided.

President Truman's personal representative, Ambassador Philip C. Jessup, will hear reports from diplomats whose combined territory embraces more than half the world's population.

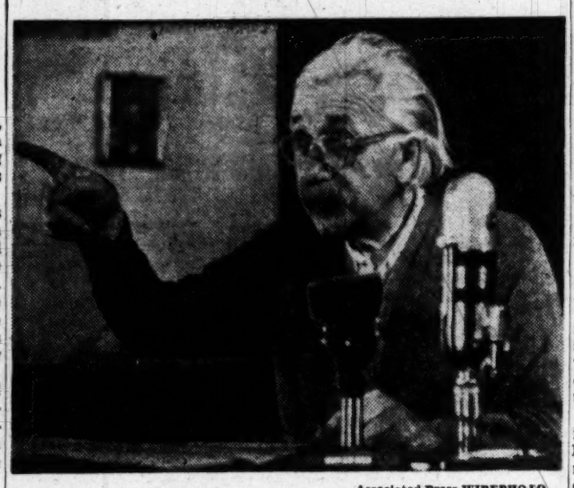
Jessup indicated the American approach to the Red threat would be political and economic. However, a week ago the American Joint Chiefs of Staff were told by top American officers in Japan that United States military strength should be used to bulwark a north-south line, preferably along the north border of Indo-China.

The conference will be held in the American Embassy.

Jessup has warned that no policy decisions or announcements will be made, but that the results will be presented to Washington.

The critical questions facing the Bangkok sessions include: First, how can the Communist tide be stopped, with the Chinese Communist regime eying southeast Asia with frank covetousness? Second, how much economic aid can the United States afford for these countries? Third, how can the political aspirations of these millions of people be encouraged and guided? and finally, what is to be the American position in the changing Orient?

Einstein Fears Annihilation . . .



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ASKS PEACE MOVES—Prof. Albert Einstein yesterday said "annihilation of any life on earth . . . is within the range of technical possibilities" if the H-bomb is developed. He made his warning on Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's first TV show. Picture was taken Friday at his Princeton, N. J. home, as film for the show was being taken

West Blamed For A-Impasse

Assembly "will be anxiously concerned that these important and serious consultations have been interrupted."

The West's letter also promised to watch for an opportunity to resume work in the commission.

Almost since the Atomic Energy Commission's inception, Western delegates have agreed that Russia's failure to cooperate in a workable system of international control and inspection has made any atomic pact impossible.

Balk On Enforcement

For the past 2½ years the Soviet delegates on the commission have advocated outlawing atomic weapons but refused to go along with any plan for enforcement.

Malik's letter, which Moscow credited to Tass in New York, also emphasized that:

". . . . The consultations . . . . were discontinued not as a result of the stand taken by the representative of the Soviet Union, as the representatives of the United States, Great Britain, France and Canada incorrectly represent in their statement, but as a result of the stand taken by the representatives of the aforementioned four countries, who have refused to exclude from their composition of the consultative conference on the Atomic question the representative of the Kuomintang group, who despite the official statements and demands of the central peoples government of the Peoples Republic of China, tries to prolong his unlawful attendance of the above-mentioned consultative conference, relying on the support of the representatives of the governments of the United States, Great Britain, France and Canada."

Another Air Pact Formed by Tito

Belgrade, Feb. 12 (U.P.).—Premier Marshal Tito's government has added another link to Yugoslavia's chain of agreements with the West by concluding negotiations for an air pact with Italy, it was announced today.

The government information office said formal signing of the treaty was expected "shortly."

The agreement will pave the way for Rome-Belgrade flights and for Yugoslav landing rights at Gorizia, on the Italian side of the Trieste frontier, informed diplomatic sources said.

The Italians probably will receive the right to land at the civil airport of Zagreb.

Franco Frees 84 More

Madrid, Spain, Feb. 12 (A.P.).—Generalissimo Francisco Franco granted conditional liberty today to 84 political prisoners, including four women. It brought to 450 the number of prisoners released in one week's time.

achieve security through military superiority.

"This mechanistic, technical-military psychological attitude had inevitable consequences," he said. "Every single act in foreign policy is governed exclusively by one viewpoint."

This policy, he said, led to establishment of military bases around the world and arming and economic strengthening of potential allies.

Within the country, he added, it caused "concentration of tremendous financial power in the hands of the military, militarization of the youth, close supervision of the loyalty of the citizens . . . intimidation of people of independent political thinking."

Einstein said the armament race now "assumes hysterical character," and "every step appears as the unavoidable consequence of the preceding one."

"In the end," he added, "there beckons more and more clearly general annihilation."

Saying that "it is impossible to achieve peace as long as every single action is taken with a possible future conflict in view," Einstein called for "solemn renunciation of violence."

"Such renunciation, however, can only be effective if at the same time a supra-national judicial and executive body is set up, empowered to decide questions of immediate moncern to the security of the nations," he said.

"Even a declaration of the nations to collaborate loyally in the realization of such a 'restricted world covenant' would considerably reduce the imminent danger of war."

Senator McMahon referred to his speech February 2 in which he proposed that this country put 10 billon dollars a year — two thirds of the present military budget—into a "crusade for peace."

He repeated his proposal that "every other country, including Russia, take two-thirds of their armament expenditure, put them in the common pot, if you please, and go about trying to uplift men instead of destroying them."

"I ask of Russia, however, that we get an effective guarantee that we would have disarmament, real disarmament," he added.

Lilienthal, in responding to an introduction by Mrs. Roosevelt said that although there is a dark side to the atom, there is a bright side and "we are not as aware of that as we might well be.

"In a discussion of this kind, there is always one actor who hasn't much to say, but he is the chief actor—the cylinder of uranium.

"This wark metal represents a whole new source of energy to do man's work. This cylinder which weighs perhaps two or three pounds, represents the equivalent in energy of thousands of tons of coal."

Toward the close of the program, Mrs. Roosevelt presented Lilienthal with a silver serving tray on behalf of "the people of the United States who will regret your resignation" as chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Chinese Reds' Invasion Blow Expected Soon

Hongkong, Feb. 12 (U.P.).—Heavy seasonal fog rolling down on Luichow Peninsula and the sea approaches to Hainan strengthened speculation today that a Communist invasion of the island was imminent.

Reports from Hainan said the island's commander, Gen. Hsueh Yueh, had left for an unnamed island between Hainan and the south China port of Pakhoi, from where he will direct air and sea defenses against the expected attack.

Chinese sources anticipated an invasion to coincide with the lunar New Year Friday. There have been reports of heavy Communist troop concentrations on Luichow, outnumbering the Hainan defenders.

On Formosa, the Kuomintang Central Daily, commenting on Nationalist air force raids on the American-owned Shanghai Power Co., said American protests against the bombings would "only give the Reds pleasure."

The official newspaper said editorially that air raids on Shanghai were aimed at crushing the Communist strength "not because it's American property" but because "we must destroy as much as possible of Communist military establishments, paralyze their industries and communications and weaken their war supply lines."

Official quarters in Taipei had no comment on the United States protest against the Shanghai bombings.

Ingrid's Baby Is Registered As Rossellini's, Given Name

Rome, Feb. 12 (A.P.). — Roberto Rossellini announced tonight that he had registered Ingrid Bergman's baby officially as his son.

The Italian film director said the baby was registered today under the name of Renato Roberto Giusto Giuseppe Rossellini, son of Roberto Rossellini.

The baby was born 10 days ago. Today was the deadline for registration under Italian law.

The boy will be called Roberto. Under Italian law he could not be given the same first name as his father.

Rossellini and Miss Bergman, the Swedish film star, are making plans to marry. She has obtained a Mexican divorce from Dr. Peter Lindstrom of Hollywood, Calif. The divorce papers are en route to Rome. When and where the marriage will take place has not been announced.

Rossellini said yesterday Miss Bergman will remain in the Rome hospital where the baby was born several more days. He said this was to safeguard the health of baby and mother.

The birth was registered by Rossellini himself with his two attorneys as witnesses. The attorneys said that under Italian law either parent could register the child first and it was not necessary for the mother to do so. They said the mother's name would be added to the registration later "after legal complications are cleared."

Gino Sotis, one of Rossellini's attorneys, said that Ingrid Bergman had wanted to give the baby "Roberto" as its first name.

The "doubler" — Renato Roberto — is a tradition of the Rossellini family, and the name Giusto is that of Ingrid's father, Sotis said.

'Capt. China' Gets Back Them Stripes

By Richard L. Coe

MESSRS. PINE AND THOMAS, producers of the Columbia's "Captain China," were in town not long ago talking about what kind of movies "the people" wanted to see.

So I was interested in the Columbia's adventurous yarn and now see what level the boys were talking on. It's the wham-bang, animated comic-strip sort of thing that's been lucrative since grandpa started going to the flicks. It's chockful of brawny fists, villainous thugs, the triumph of practical knowledge over mere theorizing and the solid virtues all the way to the finish.

What's more, to this comic strip character level it's faithful and you didn't find Coe rising from his seat in wan boredom before Gail Russell rushed into John Payne's manly arms.

It's about one of those freighters that tramp through faraway places like the China Seas. The captain of one took to drink (we later learn why it was justifiable), incurred the hatred of his more unsavory crew members, was locked in his room when the ship went down. Captain China—Payne—got out of this, found himself out as a ship captain and hunted up the mate who'd done him wrong.

On the ship he runs into a Council Bluffs girl, Gail Russell, who's been around and around and thinks she's going back to marry that Iowan. She's a passenger, so are a lady writer of mystery yarns (dumb type), a meek Dutch pair (aged, sentimental) and the mate who became a captain (Jeffrey Lynn with mustache) is making time with Gail.

"CAPTAIN CHINA." Paramount release produced by William H. Pine and William C. Thomas. Screen play by Lewis R. Foster and Gwen Bagni from a story by John and Gwen Bagni. Song: "Oh, Brandy Leave Me Alone" by Josef Marais. Music by Lucien Caillet. Directed by Lewis R. Foster. At the Columbia.

Boo on Book-Learning!

John's presence on board comes in handy when an unseasonal typhoon takes over. Discipline is in an awful state, for nobody respects the college-bred skipper. He went off course his last voyage and now he doesn't know how to get out of the typhoon. One hold isn't battened down right, ten tons of steel have broken loose from their mooring below, watery graves seem imminent.

But the captain swallows his pride, asks John for help. And gets it. Smooth sailing next dawn. True Love in the fadeout, retrieved stripes on the horizon.

None of the performers is inferior to the material and since the dialogue doesn't amount to anything more than recited blurbs, you sometimes think you're back watching the old silents.

Still, this is the sort of movie a great many people not only like, but expect to find when they go to the movies and always have.

But looking back on the Pine-Thomas discussions, it's clear everybody was talking, as usual, about different things. What this corner means as a good movie is something like "All the King's Men" or "Intruder in the Dust" or "On the Town" or "Battleground." What Pine and Thomas mean is "Captain China," "Steve Canyon" or "Terry and the Pirates." It's a big world and there's room for us all.

JACK KIRKLAND was in town over the weekend, marveling at his "Tobacco Road," back again on the Howard stage.

Kirkland is mighty happy about the way the all-Negro cast is doing his thorny drama, which did over $15,000 in New York a week ago. From here it moves into Philadelphia's downtown Locust st. theater and there are plans ahead.

All this will put off further Oliver Smith's long dream of making a musical around Jeeter Lester's family. The coproducer of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and Lucia Chase's Ballet Theater partner has long wanted to musicalize the 17-year-old hit, but it's been off the boards, sans music, for only one season, 1947, when John Barton died. While the idea seems as peculiar as musicalizing "The Little Foxes" into "Regina," the theater's a place where you can count on nothing, so a musicalized "TR" could be, could be.

As is, the singing of Evelyn Ellis and Helen Dowdy, as Ada Lester and Sister Bessie, is certainly a highlight of the current version, warm, throaty and mighty appealing.

VISITOR of the day, at the Carlton, will be John Barrymore, jr. . . . The 17-year-old son of the colorful Sweet Prince will be in town with Chill Wills to talk about their adventures while making "The Sundowners," which is due at the Warner and Ambassador Thursday.

VALENTINE'S DAY (get 'em mailed!) tomorrow will mean "Sweetheart Hour" at the four K-B theaters, during which 60 minutes every lady accompanied by one paid escort will be admitted free . . . At the Apex, Naylor and Senator Theaters, this will be from 6 to 7; at the Atlas from 7 to 8 . . . Flowers and jewelry will be waiting especially lucky ladies . . . Gals, find yourselves a hermit!

VAUGHN MONROE, who seems to own the town, is back in it, playing tonight at the Valentine Dance in the Arlington Farms Recreation Building from 9 'til 1 ayem.

TODAY'S NEW BILL: "Rigoletto," conducted by Tullio Serafin with La Scala of Milan singers on the stage of the Rome Opera, arrives this afternoon at the Dupont.

GAIL AT SEA: In the Columbia's sea adventure, "Captain China," Gail Russell comes between Jeffrey Lynn and John Payne. Also on deck for this one are Lon Chaney and Edgar Bergen

GOP Asleep, Not Moribund, Aiken Warns

Democrats were warned yesterday that they are "sitting on the same powderkeg as any majority party" and must "continue to offer leadership to the world" when they go to the country in the 1950 elections.

These words of advice came from Paul Aiken, Second Assistant Postmaster General, who had charge of the speakers' bureau in two Roosevelt election campaigns. He spoke at a Sunday breakfast of the D. C. Democratic Club, held at the Women's National Democratic Club.

Aiken told fellow Democrats not to think that the Republican Party is dead. It may be "just sleeping," he said.

He warned the 50 breakfasters present that the "powderkeg" that any majority party sits on is the danger that if mistakes are made or if times get bad, the voters are "very quick to throw out the party in power."

He said he saw a new hope, new spirit and new life in the people of Europe when he visited there after Marshall Plan aid was begun.

"A great and sacred obligation has been placed on us by the people of western Europe," he declared.

D. C. Dentists to Hear Discussion by Phone

A two-hour discussion on dentistry for children, telephoned from the University of Illinois, will be heard by members of the District Dental Society at 7:30 tonight at the Professional Arts Building, 1722 I st. nw.

The discussion, moderated by Dr. Maury Massler of the university, will be the fourth in the postgraduate course on "Current Advances in Dentistry," from Chicago. Some 7000 dentists, one-tenth of the Nation's practicing dentists, are enrolled.

'Pat' Carey Better, Friends Visit Her

Decided improvement in the condition of 8-year-old Patricia Ann Carey has been shown in the past several days.

The little girl, who was struck by an automobile January 5 and remained unconscious until a week ago, has been able to receive a few friends at her badside in Washington Sanitarium and Hospital, Takoma Park.

Among "friends" she saw was Laddie, her pet dog, who visited her Friday. When her father, James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO, held Laddie up to the window, she cried:

"Oh, look at Laddie looking at me through the window."

Her special boy friend, Stanley Herwitz, 6, son of a neighbor, also visited her Friday. Among other special visitors were her brother, Jimmie, 11, and Marybea Gibbons, 13, who used to take Patty for walks.

Jimmy and Patty played games on the hospital bed and she talked to all of her visitors and even managed to say a "Hail Mary," her father said.

Postlude

Fine Recital Performed By Curzon

By Richard Keith

The concert at Constitution Hall yesterday by Clifford Curzon, British pianist, took honors for the best of the season so far. It is a shame that more people didn't hear him.

It would be difficult to find a pianist anywhere who displays such a consistently high level of artistry. Many players have their special fortes, but Curzon seems to excel in all styles.

In his playing of Beethoven's "Les Adieux" Sonata, he made the listener aware, not only of the intricate subtleties of its design, but also of its imposing architecture. His constant attention to accurate rhythmic articulation, even in secondary parts, kept the movements driving powerfully ahead instead of coasting recklessly.

Schumann's Fantasy in C is a long and rambling work from the period of the high romantic; the average pianist can make nothing but a terrible bore out of it. However, in the hands of Curzon, who knows how to keep clear yet subdued those numberless counter melodies, which, in true Schumannesque manner, appear and disappear so mysteriously, the piece becomes a forceful expression of its era.

Turning in the second half of the program to French and Spanish impressionist music, he exploited this highly imaginative style with a brittle china-like tone which kept out any suggestion of the sentimental.

The National Gallery Orchestra, under the direction of Richard Bales, gave a concert last night at the National Gallery. Featured on the program was Bales' Episodes from a Lincoln Ballet, which has received numerous performances during the past year. It presents musical impressions based on events of the Civil War President's life. Noel Smith spoke selected lines from the Second Inaugural Address, which appear as an integral part of the music.

U. S. Agencies' Covenant Bans To Take Effect

By the United Press

Regulations become effective this week banning written racial or religious restrictions on the sale or rental of homes financed with Government-insured mortgages.

After midnight Tuesday, the Federal Housing Administration will not insure any property if a written agreement restricts the ownership or occupancy on the basis of race, color or creed. The Veterans' Administration will begin enforcing similar rules on its mortgages on Thursday.

The rules were announced December 2. At that time, there were protests that they left property owners with no way to control real estate ownership in individual neighborhoods.

But the regulations do not affect oral agreements among home owners that "restrict" sale or rental of property.

President Truman ordered the rules drawn up after the Supreme Court ruled that "restrictive covenants" are not enforceable in State or Federal courts. The high court acknowledged the right of home owners to make oral agreements.

Christian Science Talk

History Professor New Head of Yale

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ALFRED W. GRISWOLD, 43-year-old Yale professor and authority on political science and U. S. foreign policy, has been named sixtieth president of Yale University, the Yale Corporation announced yesterday. He will assume his post July 1, succeeding Dr. Charles Seymour, president for 13 years

Expense Cited In Panel on Night Court

A night police court in Washington would cost $82,000 a year, Chester H. Gray, Principal Assistant Corporation Counsel, declared last night in a WWDC "District Round Table" broadcast.

Gray said figures, prepared for him by a Municipal Court aide, show a night session would require nine additions to the court staff at $45,000 a year, plus $37,000 to maintain heat, light and other necessities.

Comparison of cost against need, he said, would indicate a second United States Commissioner for the District might solve a large part of the problem.

The question of night court came up last week before the House District Subcommittee investigating Washington's crime rate.

United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence said he believes the Commissioner's office should be placed on a full-time, salaried basis. At present the Commissioner is paid by fees.

Lawrence agreed with Gray a night court would be of little value. He pointed out that he is on call 24 hours a day to issue warrants.

Third participant on the forum was Representative James E. Noland (D., Ind.). Moderator was Attorney Ben Paul Noble.

Pole Accuses France Of Aggression Plot

Frankfurt, Germany, Feb. 12 (U.P.).—The prosecutor at the Szczecin (Stettin) espionage trial of French diplomats Andre Simon Robinbau and Gaston Drouet and their Polish co-defendants has charged France with plotting "aggression against Poland and her allies," the Polish news agency PAP said today.

The agency report, monitored here, said the prosecutor, in his final summation, demanded the death sentence for two of the Poles involved, life for a third and long prison terms for the two Frenchmen and the fourth Polish defendant.

The men on trial were arrested by the Polish security police last November in a move that started a series of arrests and counter-arrests and severely strained diplomatic relations between the two countries.

All of the defendants were reported to have confessed to espionage.

"The activity of Robineau and the other accused must be considered as gravely endangering Poland's most vital interests," the prosecutor said.

"As has been made evident from the proceedings, French diplomatic and consular apparatus in Poland was repeatedly used for spying purposes.

"For Robineau, just as for many other members of the French diplomatic and consular service in Poland, an official post served to cloak activity inimical to the country where they were accredited," the prosecutor said.

Buffalo Socialite

Wife, 36, Found Raped And Slain

MRS. MARION FRISBEE
. . . Bullet hole in temple

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 12 (AP).—The body of Mrs. Marion B. Frisbee, 36, socially prominent wife of a Buffalo businessman, was found early today, lying in an ice-encrusted ditch in a desolate section of the suburban town of Clarence.

There was a bullet hole in her left temple.

Medical Examiner James F. Benedict said there had been an obvious attempt at rape. He said he would issue a certificate of murder.

The body was discovered by a nearby resident who was driving along the road by the ditch about 7:45 a. m. Benedict said it had been there about eight hours.

Mrs. Frisbee's husband, Willard J. Frisbee, 49, is sales manager for the Queen City Pure Water Co. They had no children.

Their automobile, in which Mrs. Frisbee had left home Saturday night, was found by police shortly after noon parked on a downtown street. A 32-20 caliber rifle was lying on the floor of the front seat. An unopened bottle of liquor was on the seat. Mrs. Frisbee's blood-stained purse, with no money in it, was in the back seat.

'Nonpolitical' Union Urged By De Gaulle

Paris, Feb. 12 (U.P.). — Gen. Charles De Gaulle followed up his call for an early French general election today with an appeal for a "nonpolitical" union of Frenchmen rallied under the banner of his own right-wing party.

De Gaulle told the National Council of his rally of the French people (RPF) that the party would run its own candidates in the next elections instead of merely indorsing those of other parties as it did in the 1947 municipal elections.

"We want a union," he said, "but not one of the politicians. Union should come from the French people. We will shut no door, but the union should be formed around our organization, for we can give the country the institutions it deserves. I am convinced we will win."

The RPF National Council, winding up a four-day congress, also made a bid for the farm and labor vote. It decided to support a labor-management organization "which would always put the well-being of the working class first" and a farmers' aid program.

De Gaulle, in a speech last night, offered to join a "caretaker" French government which would pave the way for early nationwide general elections, but vowed he would not take part in any cabinet designed merely to prolong the life of France's present shaky coalition government.

Unconfirmed rumors in parliamentary circles recently said that De Gaulle was secretly negotiating a deal with Popular Republican Premier Georges Bidault.

Both De Gaulle and Bidault recently denied they had concluded a rumored "secret protocol."

Hungary Seeks Loyalty Oath From Bishops

Budapest, Hungary, Feb. 12 (U.P.). Hungary's Communist Vice Premier Matyas Rakoski has attacked Roman Catholic bishops and heads of Catholic orders for refusing to take an oath of allegiance to the Communist-led Hungarian government, the press reported today.

Rakosi, in a speech Friday to the Central Committee of the Hungarian Workers (Communist) Party, said all other clergymen took the oath but "these bishops and generals alleged they had to get special permission from their superiors to take such an oath.

Rakosi also accused France, Britain and the United States of interfering in Hungary's internal affairs in trying to force Hungary to carry out the human rights provisions of the peace treaty.

He attacked Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia for keeping "an enormous army on the orders of his American bosses," and added that the Americans know Tito is unstable and "learning by their experiences in China, they do not want to give him serious economic help, only promises."

Speakers Bureau Set Up to Press X-Ray Program

A speakers bureau composed of civic leaders has been organized by the Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring, Md., to promote the chest X-ray program of the Montgomery County Tuberculosis Association.

Members will address organizations beginning this week to encourage residents 14 years and older to be X-rayed when mobile units are in Silver Spring from March 6 through March 30.

Service and civic organizations will cooperate with the Allied Civic Group, under its sanitation and public health committee headed by Walter S. Broening. John Lemp, president of the Seven Oaks Manor Citizens Association, is chairman of the speakers' bureau.

Discharge Petition

Representative Herter signed the petition to dislodge the District home-rule bill from the House District Committee because he believes "there is sufficient interest to warrant bringing the measure to a vote." He believes also, along with many others, that the House will pass the bill if it has a chance. His comments help to sharpen up the issue which the petition presents—the issue of whether the House will tolerate dictation from a small unrepresentative group as to what measures may come before it.

Legislators are ordinarily reluctant to force a bill to a vote until it has the approval of the legislative committee to which it has been assigned. In general that precaution is quite understandable. In the case of the home-rule bill, however, we fail to see any reason why members of the House who believe in representative government, and who are eager to free Congress from the onerous burden of acting as a city council, should hesitate to sign the discharge petition. Home rule for the District is not a new issue. It has been threshed out extensively in both the House and Senate. A similar bill weathered two preliminary votes on the House floor in the Eightieth Congress. The measure has the support of both political parties as well as of the Truman Administration. Every consideration of fairness and of sound legislative procedure calls for its submission to a vote in the House before it gets caught in the end-of-the-session log jam, as it did two years ago.

The discharge petition is the only means available of dealing with a situation of this kind. It is a proper and reasonable method of preventing the will of the House and of the Democratic and Republican Parties from being thwarted. It seems to us that the necessity of resisting dictation is just as clear in this case as it was in the recent assault upon the practice of letting committee chairmen take their measures directly to the floor if they are bottled up in the Rules Committee for 21 days or more. A small faction in the House District Committee is trying to prevent the House from increasing its own efficiency in defiance of the majority will. In these circumstances it is astonishing that some of the necessary 218 signatures are still lacking.

Genocide In Europe

Senator McMahon's Foreign Relations Subcommittee, holding hearings on ratification of the genocide convention, has received shocking and sensational testimony respecting contemporary acts of genocide in eastern Europe. The witnesses were Constantine R. Jurgela of the Lithuanian American Council and Prof. Lev E. Dobriansky of Georgetown University, president of the Ukrainian Congress Committee of America. Both charged the Russians with a deliberate, systematic program of ethnic extermination—precisely the meaning of genocide within the terms of the United Nations convention outlawing it as an international crime.

This newspaper has no immediate means of verifying the charges made by these witnesses. They are charges so sweeping and extreme that they invite skepticism—in part because civilized minds balk at giving credence to crimes of such enormity, in part because there is an obligation in this time of international tension to look critically at atrocity tales that may have propagandistic purposes. But the world knows now, from its experience with Hitlerism and Russian communism, that atrocities, even on the scale depicted before the Senate subcommittee, have been committed. And belief that they are being committed today by the Russians is given encouragement by the impenetrability of the iron curtain which makes objective investigation impossible.

Mr. Jurgela told the subcommittee that "the current Soviet occupation has already cost the lives of 520,000 Lithuanians as victims of torture squads, planned starvation, political executions and sentences to death camps" and that "the Politburo . . . has drawn up a detailed plan to destroy the racial virility of Lithuanians . . . by separating husbands and wives up to the age of 40 and exiling them to different Siberian camps." Professor Dobriansky charged that "planned starvation . . . mass murder, torture and exile are employed in the systematic liquidation of the Ukrainian people."

Ratification of the genocide convention would not, of course, of itself put a stop to this inhumanity, if it is actually being practiced. It could do no more than put the civilized nations of the world on solemn record as denouncing it; and perhaps, in time, it might afford means of bringing the perpetrators before an international tribunal. Nevertheless, the genocide convention affords expression at least of civilized ideals and deserves, therefore, the indorsement of the United States. This is a first step, however inadequate, toward United Nations investigation and punishment of such frightful acts as have been charged against Soviet Russia.

After The Injunction

Although some of the miners threaten to disobey the order to return to work, it is generally believed that the rebel minority will realize the futility of opposition and that the mines will soon be operating on a full-time basis for an 80-day period. This prediction assumes that the temporary restraining order will be followed by issuance of a Taft-Hartley injunction, under which the UMW and the operators will have 60 days to engage in efforts at collective bargaining. If no agreement is reached, and the miners reject the operators' terms, the injunction will be dissolved at the end of 80 days and the union will be free to call another strike.

Meantime coal supplies will be built up and the threat of industrial paralysis caused by fuel shortages will have vanished for the time being. But there is no certainty that John L. Lewis and the coal operators will be able to settle their differences within the prescribed time. To be sure, Mr. Lewis has also been restrained from pressing his demands for a union shop, retention of the old contract provision that employes will work only when "able and willing" and limitation of welfare fund payments to union members. Although these restrictions weaken his bargaining powers, he may still press demands for wage increases and larger contributions to the welfare fund.

The fact-finding board appointed by the President to investigate the dispute concludes that at present it is these wage issues rather than the nonwage demands that are responsible for the failure to reach an agreement. "Behind the tactical maneuverings of the negotiators," it says, "is fundamentally an issue of dollars and cents." Although the board may have underrated the comparative importance of the nonwage issues, it is probably right in concluding that the major obstacle to a negotiated contract stems from the union's insistence on demands that, regardless of their character, raise the industry's operating costs and result in additions to coal prices that increase the demand for competing fuels. It is a serious defect of the Taft-Hartley Act that the fact-finding board is not empowered to recommend terms of settlement, but must confine itself to a review of the issues in dispute and statements about the attitude of the parties to the dispute.

The board concludes that both the operators and the union have contributed to the breakdown of collective bargaining by "futile sparring at perfunctory conclaves" and insistence on conditions precedent to bargaining. Mr. Lewis, moreover, has steadfastly refused to specify the amount of the wage increase desired, while the operators have flatly refused to consider any wage increases. The board seems confident that the dispute will "eventually be settled by collective bargaining." Representatives of both sides, it says, "accept and acknowledge this basic reality." We can only hope that this optimistic prediction will be realized. But we greatly doubt whether any agreement that might be reached under present conditions would satisfy the miners or prevent another strike at the expiration of the contract.

Whither Tito?

Now that the breach between Marshal Tito and the Cominform has grown irreparable and Yugoslavia has been forced by circumstances into the Western configuration of power, there seem to be two diametrically opposed opinions concerning the political implications of this momentous development. One view is that Tito, in order to consolidate popular support at home and win favor abroad, will modify the political constitution of his country so as to admit an increasing degree of representative government. Those who take this view attach great importance to the recent amendment of the electoral laws, which will permit opposition candidates to contest for places in Parliament against the hand-picked nominees of the Yugoslavian Communist Party, and also to reported tendencies toward a greater degree of local autonomy in the management of socialized industries.

The other view is that the present rapprochement of Tito and the Western powers is an affair of political expediency rather than of ideology. In this view Tito has the support of the Yugoslavs only because they consider him a lesser evil than a Stalinist dictator submissive to every whim of the Kremlin. But if the choice were between Tito and a genuinely representative government on the Western model, they would abandon him instantly were it not for intimidation by the Ozna, the dreaded secret police. This view was set forth and supported in some detail by Mr. Andre Laguerre, Paris correspondent of Time magazine, who recently returned from a visit to Tito's domain. The Tito regime, according to Mr. Laguerre, remains in power only because it is a police state, and for that reason can never be anything else. Tito, says Mr. Laguerre, > having denounced and destroyed democracy . . . could not reembrace it even if he wanted to, because in so doing he would disown his Communist Party, his secret police, his army. All of the privileged power-holders would desert him as they saw their own power disappearing. Tito, in short, is the willing prisoner of his own system.

Mr. Laguerre, however, appears to approve the present American policy of actively supporting Tito against the Russians. He also thinks that if the United States intends to give the Yugoslav Communists support in case of an attack on them by Russia it should say so now. Nevertheless, he insists that "it is vital for the clear thinking of Western policy-makers that Yugoslavia's communism never be overlooked." He describes it as a "vicious, degrading Communist state, with a new aristocracy—the party leaders with their Buicks in Dedinje; a new middle class of high officials, and a new proletariat which is poorer and bigger than the old." Mr. Laguerre, to be sure, may not be an entirely unprejudiced witness; but since so many of our present difficulties have arisen from an uncritical disposition to believe the best about everybody, and especially about the Russians, his report is worth consideration.

What Manner Of Man?

Dr. Klaus Fuchs has now confessed that for seven years he has been spying out atomic secrets in Britain and America in the interest of Communist Russia. The case, therefore, raises an important psychological question, to which, as far as we know, no satisfactory answer has yet been found.

How is it possible for persons of exceptional intellectual endowment and superior education to live a life of utter duplicity and treachery without apparent tension of conscience or inclination to remorse? In this connection it should be remembered that the character of the crime to which Dr. Fuchs has pleaded guilty is of a sort universally deemed reprehensible, since it involves not merely a betrayal of duty, but also ingratitude for benefactions. He belongs to that category of sinners for whom Dante reserved the lowest circle of his Inferno. Dr. Fuchs, in short, was a refugee who was given asylum and protection from his persecutors and advanced to a position of great prestige and trust.

What makes the question difficult is that none of the passions, such as fear, envy, vengeance for imagined grievances, that have sometimes impelled men to similar crimes appears to apply in the case of Dr. Fuchs. He mentions in his confession his friendship and even love for those whom he betrayed. His own explanation is at least ingenious; his conduct, he said, was made possible by the deliberate splitting of his personality into two selves. On the one side there was the scientist dedicated wholly to the truth; on the other the conspirator devoted wholly to perpetuating a deception. Dr. Fuchs himself referred to it as an example of "controlled schizophrenia." He told how he had > used my Marxian philosophy to conceal my thoughts which had to be separated into two compartments. One side was the man I wanted to be. I could be free and easy and happy with other people without fear of disclosing myself because I knew the other compartment would step in if I reached a danger point. It appeared to me that I had become a free man because I had succeeded in the other compartment in establishing myself completely independent of the surrounding forces of society.

This deliberate and voluntary fission of the personality is evidently one of the chief purposes of the mysterious "indoctrination" to which Communist neophytes, deemed promising instruments for conspiratorial activity, are subjected. Some effort was made by the authors of the historic Report of the Canadian Royal Commission to determine the character of the methods employed. They found that the candidates were gradually habituated > to an atmosphere and ethic of conspiracy. The general effect on the young man or woman over a period of time of secret meetings and secret acquaintances and secret objectives, plans and policies can be easily imagined. The technique seems calculated to develop the psychology of a double life and double standards.

"Welfare State"

Governor Dewey has done his party a service by refusing to pin the label "welfare state" on the Administration. As he says, "everybody wants welfare and security in one form or another." Consequently, the politician who hopes to attract votes by denouncing the Administration as an advocate of the "welfare state" is playing into its hand. This kind of phrase-mongering is worse than "clumsy"; it is downright stupid, because it creates the mistaken impression that the Republican Party, instead of being concerned about the welfare of the common man, is anxious to preserve the privileges of favored groups. To be effective, the Republicans must be prepared to offer substitute proposals for Administration policies of which they disapprove and convince the people that their program will make a sounder contribution to the general welfare. Name calling and indiscriminate criticism of all social legislation sponsored by their opponents will not influence people or win elections.

CITIES!

Your cities have betrayed you, prideful men!
The gates you set against the enemy
In sudden thunder like a wave go down;
Your towers crumble and each stone is free.
Thus is their strength a lesser thing than yours,
A lesser thing than blood and bone and faith;
Listen! Hear how a falling city pours
A sound of sorrow mightier than death!
Leave now their false and smoking promises,
Turn to the humble land from whence you came,
Which fired the light into your lonely eyes,
Within your eager breast gave love its flame.
Sink deep the furrow, safe in your heart, your hand,
The green, unbroken promise of the land.

Thinking for Peace

The hydrogen bomb, which is now being nervously contemplated, does not differ essentially in its political implications from other weapons. The basic problem still is how to control all types of weapons by removing some of the causes of war.

The situation points up sharply the moral weakness of the Western world noted by Dr. Malik a few months ago before the United Nations. What is needed is a new spiritual faith in the destiny of man, derived perhaps from the best features of the world religions with the aid of modern science. This faith should give a new rational and convincing moral code which will give people confidence in each other, and in God.

Along with this there must be a new synthesis of ideologies which combines the best features of free enterprise, democracy, socialism, and communism, and adds new features not characteristic of any of them. War with the Communist world is inevitable unless both it and the Western world make ideological changes. The Communist world at least is inherently aggressive and its present philosophy dismally hopeless. Neither the Fair Deal, the welfare state, me-tooism, or Abraham Lincolnism is the answer. The statist philosophies, no matter how attractive from a national domestic viewpoint, all have an unfavorable impact in international relations. What is needed is not fanatical fear or enthusiasm or bold 50-billion-dollar programs to buy peace, but new creative ideas in the field of ideology as well as religion.

A program of ideas and propaganda directed at the Russian people on a large scale and to Americans to some extent, combined with economic and technical aid to non-Communist areas, encouragement of national independence in the East, and the maintenance of our military strength, will weaken and throw back the Communist challenge. Anything resembling a hydrogen bomb race will be due to our own general weakness and not to the strength of that dismal Kremlin way of life which leads to the diabolical ultimate of thought control.

Let there be an end to loud clamor for collaboration and cooperation. These wonderful things are useless without ideas and policies on which men can cooperate. Let our statesmen show the imagination and creative thinking that is needed so that the average citizen will come out of his extraordinary complacency and realize that peace and security tomorrow mean some sacrifices in material goods and objectives today.

Aid to Airlines

In his letter of February 9, Mr. William Shaeffer, a "taxpayer and railroad employe," wants to know when we are going to stop building airports with public funds. It seems to be the fashion for the railroads to blame everything and everybody but themselves for their troubles and declining revenues.

The fact is that the airlines did only 1.6 percent of the total passenger transportation and one half of 1 percent of the freight transportation in 1948. The railroads conveniently forget that they have received aids from the taxpayers exceeding 600 million dollars in the course of their development.

I feel the railroads have returned full value to the country for this assistance and that they have been and will be a vital part of the Nation's economy in war and in peace. But Mr. Shaeffer and his industry should quit worrying about the airlines and the assistance they receive. The railroads can't explain their problems in terms of airline competition or public aid such as the development of airports.

The public has received and will receive a good return on its investments in airports and air navigation facilities. After all, the public gave the railroads 185 million acres of public lands. That equals a lot of airports.

Central High School

I have been very much interested in the Central High School transfer case, since I was a member of the class of June, 1949.

I would like to present, what to me would be, the perfect answer to this question. This would be a nonsegregated school system in Washington. This has been tried and has been successful in other cities. If this were done, Central would remain Central, students would not need to be transferred, teachers would not need to be transferred and Central would be filled; Cardozo would not be overcrowded.

Washington should show the way to democracy in its school system. This is the only way we can some day have the "one world" we were taught in school.

Carter's Criticism

The leading apologist for gradualism in the South, Mr. Hodding Carter, in his February 5 article, "A Case of Bilboism in Reverse," resorts to innuendoes that are unbecoming to a Pulitzer Prize winner. Mr. Carter slyly hints that Mrs. J. Waties Waring, wife of Federal Judge J. Waties Waring, is not qualified to criticize the South because she is "thrice married" and from Connecticut. He considers her recent speech delivered in Charleston, S. C., in which she criticized the Southern majority for its shortcomings, as being motivated by revenge and frustration rather than genuine human kindness.

Thus it is with great relief that one reads in the current New York Times book review section a review of Mr. Carter's recently published book, Southern Legacy, by Miss Lillian Smith, a fellow Southerner of Mr. Carter, herself a writer of national repute. Miss Smith is shocked at Mr. Carter's blindness to changes that are already taking place in the South, changes which Mr. Carter says can never happen without impairing progressive adjustments. Miss Smith regrets that Mr. Carter cannot see that the present "separate but equal" myth builds a gulf between our democracy as an ideal and our democracy as practiced. Maybe Mr. Carter will consider Miss Smith's remarks intemperate, but she at least meets some of his qualifications. She is not a Yankee, she has not been "thrice married" and she is not a member of a minority group.

"Formosa For The Formosans"

Life magazine, in a recent issue, has come out strongly in favor of the Chiang Kai-shek regime on Formosa.

Whose homeland is Formosa? Does it belong to Chiang Kai-shek or does it belong to the Formosans? Magazines like Life, and a good portion of the deluded American press, would have us believe the former. They say nothing of the long-suppressed and long enduring Formosans, whose "enthusiasm" so surprised the Nationalists. They say nothing of the Formosan "conscripts" being hardened for "the tough job of defense that lies ahead." Yet many of those happy-looking Formosans, shown swinging by before Life's cameras had relatives killed—unarmed men, women and children—by the invading Nationalist soldiery in the Formosan patriotic uprising of 1947.

Senator Taft said on the floor of the Senate January 11 that the Formosans "desire to be independent." They had a republic before the Chinese sold them down the river in the treaty of Shimonoseki, and before the Japanese conquered them. And they were independent once before that, for 21 years, after they drove out the Dutch and until they, in turn, were conquered by the Manchus. From that time on, 1683, their whole history has been one of rebellion against their foreign masters.

Why not give them independence again? Why not heed the appeal of the Formosan League for Reemancipation, made to the United Nations, for relief against the "carpetbag" regime of the Nationalists? What did Secretary Acheson mean when he stated, January 13, that the policy of our Government in the Far East favored the "self-determination of peoples?

Like the Swiss under the iron heel of Austria at the time of William Tell, the Formosans are a freedom-loving people. As stated in a United States Navy Military Government Handbook issued during the war, their "constant and often violent assertion of independence" is a characteristic dominant in their history. The Japanese knew that. When, following the "China Incident," the first Chinese bomber came over the capital on February 18, 1938, and the Japanese alerted their antiaircraft guns around the public buildings before they sounded the air-raid alarm, they trained the guns, not at the sky, but down the streets toward the Formosan population.

We should aid them. That aid need not be in men, munitions and money. Simple recognition of Formosa as an independent nation should suffice. It is not Chinese territory. It is Japanese, under all accepted principles of international law. The Nationalists are there as a government in exile, at our sufferance. They could not stay if we told them to get out.

But if we do not, the Communists are going to take Formosa. The senseless Nationalist air raids, with American-made planes, on Shanghai, on Shumchun and on the China coast shipping, can only result in the Communists blossoming forth with a Russian made air force to stop it by taking Formosa. And then we will find that we have not only lost all face in the Orient, but all friends as well.

We can implement the words of President Truman, and Secretary Acheson, and Senator Taft, and Congressman Lodge, and all the other conscientious statesmen in Washington who are groping for a solution, only by declaring for an independent, neutral Formosa. "Formosa for the Formosans" should be our watchword, before it is too late. Then it is doubtful that Mao would attack it, established as the Switzerland of the East. He would have no cogent reason.

Red Cruelties In China

A Communication

The February 9 letter signed by Grace Divine Liu is as it should be: a strongly pro-Communist outburst by an American woman who finds herself in Communist-dominated China. Her letter is her "key" to the city of Tientsin where she lives and which is now under Red control. If not for this outburst, Grace Liu would be compelled to lead a miserable existence as an American in Red China, constantly under suspicion of being "an imperialist spy."

As to Grace Liu's possible implication that the Chinese feel that the United States "harbors no good intention" toward them, I can state with just as good authority as hers that the Chinese have, in the last five decades, developed a great and genuine friendship for Americans and have at no time since the Boxer uprising shown widespread signs of suspecting that the United States harbored any evil intentions toward China. Grace Liu says she has lived 15 years "in the bosom of an ordinary Chinese family." I grew up in China and have lived 24 years in the bosoms of many Chinese families, and I can honestly state that Chinese feelings for Americans are always cordial until a conquest-mad Japanese or Russian comes along with some far-fetched propaganda specially designed to alienate two great peoples.

Grace Liu, however, contradicts herself when she belittles the present attitude of the Chinese Communists toward the United States. She says it is unreasonable for us to become indignant about "a few unfriendly acts that didn't kill a single American." As far as is known, the Chinese Reds have killed no Americans since they came to power over all of China. Prior to that, however, they did kill several Americans. There were the Stamms in Fukien, and as recently as February, 1948, Martha Anderson of Minneapolis and Esther Nordlund of Chicago, both Protestant missionaries. Since then, a false policy of toleration of the Christian church—particularly of the Catholic Church—has prevailed for the sole purpose of deceiving the world.

Since V-J Day, however, 49 Catholic missionaries have been killed by the Chinese Communists, 29 have died in prison, 3 died after release from prison, and 13 have been missing so long that they are presumed dead. Of these, 22 were Europeans and the remainder Chinese. Grace Liu apparently implies that since no Americans have been killed, we have no case against the Communists. No American can help shuddering in horror and boiling with rightful and "righteous indignation" when he reads of the indignities to which our consular representatives in Shanghai and Mukden were subjected and the manner in which non-American Catholic missionaries have been put to death.

In January, 1948, the Belgian Catholic Scheut Mission in Peiping charged that the persecution of Christians by Chinese Communists "is the most violent China has ever known, surpassing even the excesses of the Boxer rebellion . . ." European missionaries had been given such gross ill treatment that they were "slowly martyred, with the Reds then attributing their deaths to disease." Chinese Catholics were given even worse treatment. One, Father Paul Shih, was dragged by ropes over rough ground till he died; another, Father Joseph Chang, after 10 months' imprisonment, was beaten to death; Fathers Liou and Hsin were shot; and Father Chu was tortured and dragged to death.

Transit Fares

Operating expenses of the Capital Transit Co. have risen only 23 percent since 1943. (With depreciation and taxes, the rise is even lower, including the latest wage raise of 6 percent.) See page 10, 1944 Report to Stockholders, 1943 "Total Operating Expenses," and page 11 of 1948 report to Stockholders, "Total Operating Expenses." (1949 figures not available when requested). The company says, however, that the total operating expense figure for 1949 is still 22 million-odd dollars, which is less than a 1 percent rise for 1949. The 1948 operating expense amounted to $22,245,835.22. The 1943 total operating expense was $18,143,274.68. Total revenue for 1948 was $27,485,577.41, or $5,200,000 more than total operating expense. Isn't five million dollars enough revenue on 30 million? It's 16 2/3 percent for interest, dividends and taxes.

But the Transit Company is asking for an additional raise in fares of 15 percent on single fares and 10 percent on tokens, in addition to the raises already granted them of 40 percent on tokens, 40 percent on passes and 30 percent on single fares.

As the transit company has already received a raise in fare of 30 to 40 percent against a rise of only 23 percent in operating expenses, do you think they are entitled to another increase in fares and the doing away completely with all passes? Where has the money gone?

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

"The Existing Situation Of Fact"

LAST Wednesday Mr. Acheson implied much more than he said. In answering bluntly a rather unimportant question he opened up quite discreetly the grave question which preys upon the minds and hearts of informed and responsible men.

Lippmann

HIS REMARKS were addressed to the naive notion that peace can be had by a general agreement to disarm and to cause no more trouble. Since the affair of the hydrogen bomb he has been urged to make one more try—to have a Truman-Stalin meeting or another international conference, and he must have felt that the McMahon and Tydings speeches would encourage such wishful and embarrassing notions.

It would have been easy enough to fend off pressure of this sort by the usual formula, which Mr. Truman used the very next day: "if we got just one little bit of cooperation from the Soviet government we could get the job done." But Mr. Acheson's way of answering the Senators—or more precisely what the innocent public might think the Senators meant—was much more elaborate.

MR. ACHESON constructed an argument on the proposition that

"Agreements with the Soviet Union are useful when those agreements register or record an existing situation of fact, but otherwise they are not of much use."

That is certainly true, and no doubt it cannot be said too often in a country which until so very recently felt it was isolated from the hard realities of diplomacy and of power politics. The proposition is broadly true of all agreements among sovereign states which affect their important interests. It would be hard to cite any agreement of this type which has endured when it did not register "an existing situation of fact"—that is to say, when the over-all balance of interests and forces did not make it profitable, necessary and expedient to observe the agreement or to let it be enforced. But in the Soviet diplomacy this rule is literally and nakedly and ruthlessly followed.

AND YET, in disposing of the naive, Mr. Acheson let it be realized that there is a much bigger question on his mind. The question emerges when people ask, as indeed they will: what is "the existing situation of fact" which makes it not useful at this time to make agreements with the Soviet Union?

"We are trying," said the Secretary, "to extend the areas of possible agreement with the Soviet Union by creating situations so strong that they can be recognized and out of them can grow agreements." He cited the Marshall Plan, the arms program, and Point Four as illustrations of how we are trying to create "strong situations." But he said that "this road is a very long one and a very difficult one."

And so it is. For in the past year several "situations" have not become stronger—obviously not eastern Asia, and certainly not, with the Soviets in possession of the atomic bomb, the general balance of power between the Soviets and the West.

ON THE same day that Mr. Acheson was talking, Dr. Harold C. Urey was testifying before a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee. Dr. Urey believes that the Soviet Union is already in a position to use the atomic bomb to compel some of the Atlantic nations to renounce the Atlantic Pact by tying up a tramp steamer with an atom bomb aboard at some dock in one of their harbors. Dr. Urey, I think we may assume, was trying to illustrate a point vividly with a crude and sensational example. It is not likely that the Soviets will actually mine the harbor of Copenhagen to terrorize Denmark this year. That would touch off a world war which a hard-bitten realist like Stalin cannot possibly want.

But what is highly probable, indeed certain, is that the Soviets will use their bombs as a diplomatic instrument, in military parlance as a force in being, to detach as many nations as they can from the American sphere of influence. They do not have to use the bomb. They have only to possess it and the necessary airplanes, submarines, and tramp steamers to deliver the bomb in order to raise the question of how western Germany, and Scandinavia, and France, and Great Britain are to be defended against atomic attack.

THE SOVIETS do not have to make threats: on the contrary, if their object is to detach these countries, they have much more to gain by continuing to talk about peace. For we are saying all, and a lot more than is necessary, to make our allies abroad realize their predicament.

When we show that even we, on whom they depend for protection, are frightened, that even we are afraid for our cities and our harbors, when we publish official reports and send them to the Governors of our States explaining in detail the fabulous cost of achieving inadequate protection even for ourselves, what is a German in the Ruhr, or any European living in a concentrated industrial area or in a harbor city to make of his own future?

What is he to make of it when he hears the President of the United States saying that the American plan of 1946, which the Soviets would not touch, is still the only possible plan?

THE GRIM truth, which lay just under the surface of Mr. Acheson's remarks, is that the balance of power has been seriously turned against us by the Soviet achievement of atomic weapons. That is the truth we shall have to face up to, and then do some very hard thinking about it.

In thinking about it, let us beware of jumping to conclusions—that the imbalance can be righted by the hydrogen bomb or by more money for the Voice of America; or, on the other hand, that Stalin is Hitler, and that his purpose is the military conquest of the world.

There is every reason to think that Stalin will use, as he has used, military power as a political instrument, and that his paramount political objective is to extrude the United States from Asia and from Europe, to push the United States back into the isolation from which it emerged 10 years ago.

GRIN AND BEAR IT — By Litchy

"As I understand it, a couple of Hydrogen bombs could flatten the world . . . however, my committee favors less drastic measures, first! . . ."

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Mr. Johnson's Untruths

IT IS A GRAVE act to charge a high official with deliberately misinforming the Nation. But it is graver still for the Nation to be grossly and persistently misled about vital matters, as we are now being misled by Secretary of Defense Louis A. Johnson's smarmy misrepresentations. The time has come to call a spade a spade. Johnson has not been telling the truth about the national defense.

Specifically, on December 7, Johnson told the National Association of Manufacturers that his savings in the defense budget were being made "without any reduction in our state of preparedness." He then reiterated this claim in his official annual report, stating that we are "obtaining greater national security at less expense." All precautions are being taken, he said, to "increase rather than diminish the over-all combat capabilities of the armed forces." Many other similar statements of the Secretary of Defense might also be cited.

Only a few of the facts that flatly and utterly refute these claims of Johnson's can be compressed into the space of a newspaper column. Yet even these few facts are sufficient to prove that the Secretary of Defense has been practicing what amounts to a confidence trick upon the Nation.

AS BETWEEN the services, the Navy is, of course, the heaviest sufferer from Johnsonian "economy." Taking the 1949 strength as the base, and the new budget as the comparison, the fleets at sea are being reduced from 18 cruisers to 13; from 8 heavy carriers to 6; from 5 light and escort carriers to 3; from 155 destroyers to 140; from 79 submarines to 70, and from 439 other active ships to 414. Naval manpower is being drastically cut, and the strength of the Marine Corps, never noted for its overhead, is being reduced by nearly the equivalent of a division, down to 72,000 men.

In the air, the Navy's attack carrier groups are being cut from 14 to 9, with further weakening of the fighting strength of each group. Antisubmarine escort carrier squadrons are being cut from 8 to 7 with similar inner weakening. Patrol squadrons, also vital for antisubmarine work, are being cut from 30 to 20. And the Marine air arm has been chopped down from 23 fighter squadrons to 12. Over-all, Naval and Marine aircraft in commission have been reduced by more than 1000.

Nor is this the worst. Johnson has also taken his axe to the vital replacement of obsolescent and obsolete aircraft. The 1951 budget will give the Navy only about 60 percent of the new planes which are needed to keep even the shrunken Naval and Marine air arms continuously provided with fully modern types. If this reduced replacement rate is maintained, as Johnson plans, Navy and Marine air strength will not merely suffer as it has suffered already. It will also be further crippled by the equipment of a large proportion of its groups and squadrons with planes unfit for modern war.

The case of the Air Force is less dramatic, but hardly less grave. As everyone knows, all competent authorities, including the Joint Chiefs of Staff, have established an Air Force of 70 groups as the minimum needed to provide adequate offensive striking power, reasonable air support for our ground armies, and minimum air defense. Working toward this goal, the Air Force had activated (but not equipped) more than 54 groups. Then came the cut-back to 48 groups. The 15 activated heavy-bomber groups were maintained. But tactical groups, including light bomber and fighter, were reduced from 32 to 27, and troop-carrier groups were cut from 7 to 6.

This was frightening enough. The de-activation of tactical groups has virtually deprived our ground forces of hope of effective, close air support—only one light bomber group is left for this essential purpose. Yet Johnson's main attack on the Air Force has been in the concealed form of another slash in the replacement rate similar to that inflicted on Navy air.

The Air Force retains as many planes as in 1949. But the Air Force, like the naval air arm, is not being permitted to keep its group continuously provided with modern aircraft. For this purpose, more than $1,700,000,000 was requested when the budget was being prepared. The figure allowed under the Johnsonian "economy" program is $1,300,000,000.

THIS MEANS that the Air Force replacement rate has been cut approximately 25 percent below what is thought necessary to keep the 48 authorized air groups fully ready for modern war. We may officially continue to possess an Air Force of 48 groups. But it is calculated that somewhere between 10 and 15 of these groups will have only obsolete weapons by 1955.

In the Army alone, genuine economies have been made without cuts in combat strength. By the firm insistence of Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray, the fighting units of the ground forces remain what they were. Even so, with our ground force strength stationary, and our naval and air power being continuously impaired, our net loss of strength is already very great. And the loss will be far greater still if this process goes on.

Johnson has, to be sure, succeeded in paring something from the outrageously swollen overheads of the services. He has also saved funds by eliminating such foolishly competitive enterprises as the giant carrier. Yet the facts cited above add up to only one possible conclusion—outright sacrifices of strength account for the vast bulk of Johnson's "economies."

This, Johnson has repeatedly denied. One must take one's choice, therefore, between two views: either the Secretary of Defense is too hopelessly incompetent to recognize a cut in "combat capabilities" when he makes it, or he stands convicted of untruth in detail, as charged. Unfortunately, besides this untruth in detail, Johnson is also guilty of larger and more damaging misrepresentations, which must be examined in a subsequent report.

Truman Selected For One of Four Dr. Wise Awards

New York, Feb. 12 (U.P.).—President Truman has been chosen as one of the four recipients of the first annual Stephen S. Wise awards, the American Jewish Congress announced today.

The awards of $1500 each were established last year to mark the late Dr. Wise's 75th birthday and to be presented annually for outstanding contributions in the four major fields to which Dr. Wise dedicated his life. Dr. Wise, founder and president of the AJC, died shortly after his 75th birthday.

Mr. Truman will receive the award for his contribution to the extension of civil rights in the United States; Prime Minister David Ben Gurion, of Israel, for his contribution to the growth and development of Israel; Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, chairman of the European executive council of the joint distribution committee, for his contribution to the welfare of Jews in other lands; and Prof. Harry Austryn Wolfson, of Harvard University, for his contribution to the enrichment of Jewish learning and scholarship.

The awards will be presented here March 23.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

A CLUE to the type of strategy that has built the Nats into an eighth-place ball club is now available. The Washington club's decision to shorten the home run distances in left and center fields is nothing short of an invitation to visiting clubs to murder his pitching.

Clark Griffith chipped 19 feet off the terrain in the outfield sectors to install 1000 more box seats, but actually home-run territory was shortened by more than that figure. Where previously a home run wallop had to clear a 10-foot barrier in front of the bleachers merely a 3-foot wall now defies the power hitters.

POVICH

The idea, as Griffith expressed it, was to give the fans the excitement of more home runs—but whose? Certainly the Nats, with their lack of muscular right-handers will not be benefitted to the same degree as the visiting teams who can wheel a slew of right-handed power hitters into his stadium.

Home runs can be exciting, all right, but scarcely when they are hit by the visiting club in profusion, as is threatened. Griffith's move is hardly expected to make him popular with his own pitching.

WORKING IN THE ample acres of Griffith Stadium has been one of the few joys of pitchers attached to the Nats in recent years. Unsupported by any great show of hitting on their own side, they at least had the league's biggest park to pitch in. Griffith hasn't curtailed it much, but it is enough to hurt.

Certainly Griffith had to be gambling on the expectancy of more home runs by his right-handed hitters—Sam Mele, Clyde Vollmer, Eddie Yost, Al Evans and Sam Dente. There was no great compulsion on his part to add those 1000 new seats. After opening day, the Washington park is not filled on an average of three times per season and the call for more seats was vague.

The big danger is, of course, that the visiting clubs will go home-run crazy in Griffith's park despite the fact that it is still a respectable 382-foot clout into left field, and 371 into center. They have what the Nats lacks—those long fly ball hitters like Joe Gordon, Joe DiMaggio, Sam Chapman, Lou Boudreau, Ken Keltner, Jerry Priddy, Vern Stephens and Bobby Doerr.

MOREOVER, THE NATS won't have a single .300 hitter swinging for those new fences. Sam Mele, the likeliest right-handed hitter to be seen in the Washington outfield, batted only .242 last season. Yost hit .259, Evans .270. Better-average hitters on the visiting clubs will be shooting at those same fences.

It's significant that visiting clubs dumped seven home runs into the left and center field seats last season, in contrast to the mere five by the Nats. In the now-cozier confines of the place, the proportion is certain to be greater. It's a rare day when Washington fans haven't seen the Nats' outfielders back up to the wall for balls that in the future will sail in for home runs.

For Washington fans, the lone encouraging item is that Griffith has said his move could be of merely a trial nature, and that he'll pull those new seats out if the Nats take too bad a beating on the new proposition. Barring unexpected developments or a sudden growth of muscles among the Nats, the seats figure to come out by May 15.

A FORETASTE of what is apt to happen was given Griffith and his Washington customers a couple of years ago, when the Yankees played the opening game here. In that one, the Yanks staged a seven-run first inning. Griffith had in the traditional temporary seats for opening day, on the pattern of the new 1950 installations.

Allie Reynolds, a pitcher, and Tommy Henrich, a left-handed hitter, whacked Yankee homers into those temporary seats, if Griff remembers. The Nats were out of the ball game, virtually before they came to bat for the first time.

The disconsolate guy among the Yankees on that opening day was Joe DiMaggio, who wasn't meeting the ball solidly and couldn't take advantage of the shortened distances. The seats were gone the next day, and DiMaggio twice was robbed by catches made by Washington outfielders whose shoulder-blades were brushing the left field wall.

"I'm swinging late," moaned DiMag on his return to the bench, "24 hours late."

Tri-City Loses, 95-89, But Nichols Scores 18

Moline, Ill., Feb. 12 (AP)—The Indianapolis Olympians boosted their lead in the National Basketball Association's western division today by beating the Tri-City Blackhawks 95-89 before a crowd of 6089.

Center Jack Nichols, recently traded to Tri-City by Washington, got 18 points in his first game with the Blackhawks.

Two comparatively small players, Bruce Hale and Ralph Beard, led the Olympians' second-half rally after the score was knotted at the intermission, 44-all. Beard got 16 of his 23 points in the second half, while Hale was getting 12 of his 20.

Alex Groza of Indianapolis was high scorer with 25 points.

Pollard Outshines Mikan in Laker Win

Minneapolis, Feb. 12 (AP).—Jim Pollard was the Minneapolis Lakers high scorer for a change tonight, scoring 29 points as the Lakers beat Boston, 88-70, in a National Basketball Association game.

George Mikan scored 23 and Vern Mikkelsen 10, giving the Laker' frontline trio 62 points together as Minneapolis scored its twentieth straight home victory.

Minneapolis led from the start and, except for Sonny Hertzberg's nine baskets from well out on the floor, Boston was hardly in the game. Hertzberg totaled 22 points. The crowd was 9012.

Oklahoma Power Forces Faurot To Turn Author Prematurely

Columbia, Mo., Feb. 11 (AP).—Don Faurot is writing a book on so-called "Split T" football and it's going to be published prematurely.

Faurot said today he had planned so wait until his University of Missouri Tigers won another Big Seven Conference championship before publishing the book. But, he explained:

"As long as Oklahoma is in the league it looks as though I'll be dead from rheumatism before we win another one."

The book probably will be released next fall, Faurot said. It will deal with every phase of the system which features a spread line and the sliding quarterback.

Head man at Missouri since 1935, excepting three years in the Navy, Faurot coached the Tigers to the Big Seven title in 1939, 1941 and 1942.

Terp Boxers Clash With Michigan State

East Lansing, Mich., Feb. 12.—Michigan State's unbeaten boxing team clashes with Maryland here tomorrow night.

The Terrapins are also unbeaten, owning a victory over Army and a tie with The Citadel in their two outings this season. The Spartans have dumped Minnesota and Penn State.

It will be the first of two matches this week for Maryland. They take on the Quantico Marines at Quantico Saturday night.

Andy Quattrocchi, Maryland's sensational knockout artist, seeks his third straight knockout and his 17th in 21 college bouts in the 130-pound test.

St. John's Wins 18th of Year, 58-33, Over LaSalle

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 12.—St. John's High School of Washington ran up its eighteenth win against three losses, trouncing LaSalle, 58-33, here today.

Doug Connoly, who was hitting on long set shots, was the only scoring threat LaSalle could muster and Connoly's 14 wasn't near enough as Bob MacDonald, Cadet center, scored 18, and little Bobby McLindon tossed in 11 for the Cadets.

Terps Play South Carolina Here Tonight

Maryland plays host to South Carolina in a Southern Conference game and Catholic University journeys to Baltimore to meet the Loyola Greyhounds, in the only games involving local college teams tonight.

Maryland and South Carolina are both out of contention in the Southern Conference playoff picture while Loyola is definitely in the Mason-Dixon championships with Catholic still holding a fighting chance to gain a playoff berth.

The Cards, however, aren't given much chance of enhancing their 4-7 record tonight.

Maryland, fresh from a stunning upset of Duke's Blue Devils, will rule a slight favorite over the Gamecocks.

Maryland, however, has been an in-and-out team all year, more often out, than in, and is seeking to win two straight for the first time this season.

St. Martin's Tops Holy Name

St. Martin's defeated Holy Name, 31-15, yesterday in the Catholic Youth Organization intermediate league competition.

Other scores: Holy Comforter, 27; St. Alysious, 12. St. Joseph's 43; St. Joseph's Home, 7. Immaculate Conception, 34; St. Paul's, 23. St. Teresa's, 67; St. Stephens, 42. St. Matthew's forfeited to St. Dominic's.

Newhouser Faces 10 Pct. Cut at Detroit

Detroit, Feb. 12 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers had all but five of their 38-man squad signed to 1950 contracts today and forecast little trouble in signing that quintet.

The roster of still unsigned players contained such luminaries as Pitchers Hal Newhouser and Freddie Hutchinson; Catcher Aaron Robinson and Outfielders Vic Wertz and Hoot Evers.

The question of Newhouser's 1950 salary probably is the one that General Manager Billy Evans of the Tigers will find the most involved.

Newhouser reportedly got between $50,000 and $55,000 last year, his eleventh with the Detroit club. He wound up with an 18-11 record then.

Fairly reliable sources have indicated the Detroit ball club asked its lefthanded ace to take a 10 percent cut this year. That would bring him down near the salary level of his old rival, Bobby Feller of the Cleveland Indians, who settled for a flat $45,000 in the 1950 season.

Newhauser conferred with Evans last month before departing for Florida and a brief vacation. He is due back in Detroit Monday or Tuesday for another huddle with the Tiger management.

LeBaron's Stars Beat Celeri's Team by 7 to 6

Lodi, Calif., Feb. 12 (AP).—Eddie Lebaron's All-Stars scored a 7-to-6 football victory over Bob Celeri's All-Stars today in a game between former college players before 24,000.

The contest was supposed to decide which of California's two outstanding T-formation quarterbacks of 1949—Celeri at California and Lebaron at College of the Pacific—is better. But the game, played on a rain-softened field, hardly proved an accurate test. Each player will receive between $500 and $600. Lebaron and Celeri each will receive $2500.

The LeBarons primarily were COP seniors and grads; the Celeris were CAL seniors and graduates.

Yale Names Hall Athletic Director

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 12 (AP). Robert A. (Bob) Hall of Rosemont, Pa., today was named chairman of the board of athletic control and director of athletics at Yale, effective April 1.

Hall was graduated with the class of 1930. He succeeds Robert J. H. (Bob) Kiphuth, who resigned as athletic director because of ill health on December 24.

The new, 43-year-old athletic boss here has been serving in an executive capacity for Dresser Industries of Philadelphia.

Lavelle Ill; TD Lunch Off

Jack Lavelle, football scout of Yale University and the New York Giants, who was scheduled to address the weekly Touchdown Club luncheon today, is ill at his home and will be unable to appear.

The luncheon, which was set for 12:30 at the Touchdown Club, has been canceled.

6000 Watch Louis In Haiti Exhibition

Port-Au-Prince, Haiti, Feb. 12 (AP).—Joe Louis, former heavyweight champion of the world, fought a six-round exhibition last night against Ralph Schneider. A crowd of 6000 turned out for the performance, which produced little excitement.

Titone 8-5 Over Osario Here Tonight

TITONE

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez has plans, if Titone wins impressively, to pit Charlie against Jimmy Cooper at Griffith Stadium May 22.

Menendez has indicated that if Titone loses, the Puerto Rican might land the ball park spot against Cooper. Titone fought Cooper three times, losing, winning and drawing. The rugged Osario beat Jimmy and lost to him.

Titone will rule an 8-5 favorite, Washington's Pat Thomas, who has won 13 out of 15 pro bouts, meets Joe Dimines of Baltimore, in a five-rounder.

Johnny Pratt, who won All-Army middleweight honors, takes on Benny Droll of Pittsburgh, in a five. A four finds Bobby Rupard, Government Printing Office employe, meeting Bobby Busick, while in other fours Rufus Berry will fight Johnny Holt and "Ape" Kaiser will box Wallace Sparkle.

Sam's 265 Beats Out Demaret by One Stroke

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 12 (AP). Drawling Sammy Snead, the West Virginia slammer, rolled home with his second eight-under-par 63 in two days today to win the twenty-third $10,000 Texas Open with a 72-hole card of 265.

He thus became the second man in history to take this storied golf tournament twice. Sam first triumphed in 1948.

Snead beat out Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Calif., by one stroke for the $2000 first money. Demaret won $1400.

The colorful star from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., bagged the title with a typical Snead finish.

In the final 36 holes he had a total score of 126—a new PGA record for the final two rounds of a tournament.

Fred Haas, jr., the New Orleans thin man who led at the three-quarters mark, took a three-under par 68 today to wind up third and get $1000.

Snead's 63 over the 6400-yard Brackenridge Park course came within a stroke of the competitive course record and his 265 was just one stroke under the tournament record set by Ben Hogan in 1946 and tied by Snead in 1948.

George Schneiter, tournament manager of the PGA, said Snead's great 126 for the last two rounds bettered the record made by Sam Byrd here in 1945.

The first man to win this tournament twice was Bill Melhorn, who triumphed in 1928 and 1929.

Snead had a chance to tie the competitive course record set by Demaret in 1947 as he came into the eighteenth green nine under par. He drove 40 feet from the pin on the par three hole then laid up 21½ feet away, but he missed the putt and went one over par for the hole.

"Gee, it was a-rainin,' the hail was a-fallin' and the people a-runnin' an' I just couldn't concentrate on putting," Snead drawled. An estimated 8000 gallery watched the somberly dressed Snead at the finish.

Demaret shot a 65 himself. Jaunty Jimmy, dressed in a yellow sweater, purple pants, and black, brown and white shoes, finished a couple of threesomes ahead of Snead.

Hearing that Sam was coming in nine under par, Demaret remarked: "Each night, before I go to sleep, I pray that I can sink half as many putts as Sam the next day."

Cary Middlecoff of Ormond Beach, Fla., the National Open champion, wound up fourth with 270 and earned $800, while George Fazio of Conshohocken, Pa., was next with 271 and drew $700.

Snead fired nine birdies and had 31 putts with six one-putt greens. He said he didn't play as well as yesterday. He had a couple of nice putts, however—a 15-footer on No. 6 and a 20-footer on No. 11.

Snead ran his total winnings for the year to $7558. Demaret stayed in second place in earnings with $4582.

Wire Shutdown Asked

2 Men Found Phoning Results From Shack Near Race Track

Tallahassee, Fla., Feb. 12 (AP). Attorney General Richard Ervin said today he will ask that Florida's anti-bookie wire service law be invoked to stop operations of Continental Press Service and every other agency that may have a tie in with it.

He said he will request the State Railroad and Public Utilities Commission to take the action on the basis of evidence that two men were found telephoning horse race results to Continental in New York from a communications shack overlooking Sunshine Park near Tampa.

The men gave their names as Alfred M. Olsen and Al Opperman of Miami. Ervin said they admitted they were watching the Sunshine Park races through binoculars and telephoning results to Continental Press Service in New York.

He said he will ask the telephone company to remove its lines from the shack the men were using. The anti-bookie law prohibits use of private telephone and telegraph lines for transmission of racing results and other information used in gambling.

Ervin said discovery of the Sunshine Park communications shack was the first direct evidence his investigators have uncovered to indicate how racing information is getting out of the State.

He previously reported it was being telegraphed back into the State over such legitimate news wires as those of the Associated Press before official results were posted at the tracks.

At his request, the utilities commission has agreed to ask nearly all major news and telegraph services to appear at a Miami hearing March 7 to explain how they get their racing information so quickly.

The expose at Sunshine Park was made by officers led by Assistant Attorney General James B. Toney, Ervin's right-hand man in ferreting out bookmakers.

We've solved the Sunshine Park mystery," said Toney, "but we still don't know how they do it at Hialeah. Maybe through some sort of wigwagging system."

The assistant attorney general called the Florida race information relay very efficient. He said it was possible for gamblers in Florida and elsewhere to get the results within 30 seconds.

The two spotters at Sunshine, he added, used a false turret atop the shack as a lookout. They were so close, one of the other officers said, that they almost could read the tote board results with the naked eye.

Bauer Sisters Win Exhibition

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 12 (U.P.). The brilliant Bauer beauties dazzled another Florida golf gallery today when they teamed to beat Peggy Kirk and Louise Suggs, 1-up, in an exhibition.

The triumph followed by 24 hours the stirring finale to the Palm Beach tournament in which 15-year-old Marlene whipped her big sister, Alice, 5 and 4, yesterday.

At 36, Snead Is at Top of His Game

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

AT 36, when most athletes have called it a day, Samuel Jackson Snead is shooting the most phenomenal golf of his phenomenal career . . . In six championship tourneys since January 10, sweet-swinging Sambo is 60 under par, has had 14 rounds in which he's been 69 or lower and has been as high as 71 only once in his last 13 rounds . . . His 18-hole tours have included three 63's and for the entire two dozen 18 hole trips he's averaged 68.6 strokes per round . . . In the six winter tournaments, including yesterday's Texas Open, Sam has won two, tied for first in another, finished second in two others and was fourteenth in the other. . . . Except for the Long Beach Open when his six-under-par 277 left him in fourteenth place, Snead trailed the leader in the two tournaments he didn't win by only two strokes . . . If he keeps up the good work he'll probably be invited to defend his National Celebrities Golf Championship here June 3-4.

THERE WERE no regrets on the parts of Freddie Scolari, Bones McKinney and Johnny Norlander when the Caps traded Jack Nichols to Tri-City. McKinney and Scolari, darlings of local fans for three years, were jealous of his increasing popularity while Norlander and Nichols had several tiffs in practices . . . Matchmaker Gabe Menendez, of Turner's Arena, may try Sunday afternoon boxing shows in an effort to snap his slump at the box office . . . The NCAA blacklisting of seven schools has had two amusing repercussions. Two weeks after the "sinners" were exposed, Maryland, one of the seven, met The Citadel, another of the noncompliers, in boxing . . . And only Saturday, Gus Tebel, basketball coach of Virginia, one of the 7, was named on a district committee to select teams for the regional NCAA basketball tournament . . .

GEORGE GARBER, freshman baskketball coach at George Washington, was the calmest man in the Armory Saturday as the Colonials went two overtime periods to beat Duke. And he had reason to be. . . . Last year, when he was head coach of the varsity, Garber sweated out three overtime periods before his Colonials, down to their last man and their last breath, nosed out William and Mary in the semifinals of the Conference championships. . . . The Southern Conference's failure to agree on a commissioner over the weekend undoubtedly means that Coach Wallace Wade of Duke will ask that he no longer be considered for the job. Wade was willing to accept the position provided he was named before spring football practice started at Duke, but once practices began Wade wouldn't be interested. . . . Coach Red Auerbach's Tri-City Blackhawks will be busting their backs trying to beat the Caps here Wednesday. Even Gene Vance, one of the Illinois Whiz Kids who plays only home games for Tri-City, has agreed to make the trip to Washington. . . . Eddie LaFond, Catholic University boxing coach, likes the new rule which requires the referee to tell the coach the result of each round after the bell. . . . "In this way you get one shock instead of three at a time," LaFond says. The rule was put in at the behest of college boxing coaches last year.

Holy Cross Cinch for NCAA Berth

New York, Feb. 12 (AP).—The college basketball season enters its stretch drive this week with the top teams intensifying their drives to gain bids in the sport's world series, the National Invitation and NCAA tournaments in March.

At the moment powers under consideration for the 12-team invitation in New York's Madison Square Garden include unbeaten Holy Cross, Kentucky, San Francisco, the defending champs; St. John's L. I. U., C. C. N. Y., Western Kentucky, LaSalle, Bradley, Duquesne, North Carolina State, Kansas State, St. Louis, Toledo, U. C. L.A., Canisius and Niagara.

Holy Cross also appears a cinch to gain the NCAA's District One berth. District Two is anybody's guess with Villanova, Cornell, Columbia, Syracuse, LaSalle and C.C.N.Y. all in contention.

Kentucky, last season's NCAA champ or North Carolina State appear to have the inside track on the District Three nomination. Ohio State, running away with the Big Ten race, has just about landed the District Four slot.

District Five appears to lie between Bradley or Kansas State, assuming they win their conference races. Chief opposition for Bradley may be provided by St. Louis and Detroit while Kansas State may find trouble with Nebraska, Colorado and possibly Kansas.

The same situation prevails in District 6 with Texas A.&M. of the Southwest Conference and Arizona of the Border the contending forces at the moment. Wyoming looms as the best bet for District 7 while it's open house in District 8 with the winner of the Pacific Coast Conference usually drawing the nod. At the moment both the Northern and Southern Division races in the coast conference are neck-and-neck affairs.

Meanwhile, Holy Cross strengthened its bid to retin its No. 1 slot in the weekly Associated Press poll. The Crusaders tacked three triumphs to their record during the week to boost their untarnished slate to 20 games.

D. C. Badminton Star Loses in Baltimore

Baltimore, Feb. 12. (AP).—Marie Ussing, former Danish badminton champion who now lives in Washington, faded in the second and third games today to lose the women's finals of the Baltimore City invitational badminton tournament to Patsey Stephens of Baltimore

Mrs. Stephens was extended to win the first game, 14-11, but she continued strong to overpower the Washington star, 11—6 and 11—2.

Gonzaga, Little Hoyas Win in Catholic League

DeMatha, St. Anthony's Lose Out

By Jules Loh

With league leading St. John's enjoying a respite from Catholic high league play, the other four teams in the league fought it out among themselves.

St. John's leads the league with five wins and no losses while Gonzaga and DeMatha are now tied for second with three wins against two defeats.

Gonzaga romped to a 59-43 win over DeMatha to avenge an early season upset and in the second game of yesterday's double-header at Catholic University, Georgetown Prep scrambled to a 60-53 win over St. Anthony's. Both now have 4-1 records.

Paul McGowan and Mike Nolan paced Gonzaga with 18 and 13 while Frank Fuqua was high for DeMatha with 14.

Ed Gardiner and Pat Haley ran wild for the Little Hoyas, scoring 21 and 19 points. Lou Pennini and Bob Hall with 11 apiece led St. Anthony's.

Bill Bennings Says:

Dear Folks: While Calumet probably would have preferred to win the San Antonio with Citation, the barn can't feel blue over the fact that Ponder won. Warren Wright's outfit certainly is sittin' on top of the turf world. If Citation don't hold up, Ponder, a 4-year-old, will be right there to take up the stake business. Coaltown's defeat in the McLennan was not unexpected. That blinding early speed of his youth probably has taken something out of him. At least, he couldn't even get to the top of Three Rings. Armed, it appears, is on the down grade. I hate to think of the number of win and place parlays that blew. Only 19 days to Charles Town.—Bill.

Empty Pits Indicated

all-out mines shutdown neared an emergency.

Coal supplies are estimated at anywhere from one to three weeks. Layoffs in coal-using industries are past the 35,000 mark and are due to zoom higher if the strike continues.

Field generals relayed Lewis' orders as he celebrated his seventieth birthday. Their comment included:

William Hynes, District 4 (southwestern Pennsylvania):

"We've been having trouble down here for some time (District 4 has been the core of the current strike), so I don't think they'll go back so easily.

"The miners are pretty determined about getting a contract. It may take a while, but eventually we'll settle all this."

Adolph Pacifico, District 6 (northern West Virginia and Ohio):

"You can lead a horse to water but it's questionable whether you can make him drink.

Feel They're Still in U. S.

"They (miners) are deeply resentful of the idea of being compelled to go to work against their will. They feel they're still in the United States of America."

Cecil Urbaniak, District 31 (West Virginia):

"To hell with them. Let them (the fact finders) dig the coal. . . . I seriously doubt if our men will work with any degree of success under these (injunctive) conditions."

Hugh White, Illinois district:

"As free American citizens, I doubt very much if the 24,000 Illinois miners will go back to work Monday."

The only reports indicating compliance with Lewis' orders came from areas which produce relatively small amounts of coal.

In Pennsylvania, UMW's biggest local voted to continue the strike despite the court's orders. It is the 2450-member Robena local near Uniontown, Pa.

After Lewis sent his telegram, President John Ozanich of the Robena local declared:

"We will not go back before we get a contract. Lewis didn't call us out and he can't tell us when to go back."

Potato Smuggling Into Maine Swamps U. S. Customs Forces

dian border on a commercial scale is now believed limited to the smuggling of potatoes across the border to Aroostook County, Maine."

This remark led Representative Gordon Canfield (R., N. J.) to ask a "little more about that."

"You say smuggling of potatoes from Canada into our potato county up in Maine has been taking retary Charles F. Brannan will speak at a State farm bureau place?" Canfield asked. "I always understood Aroostook County was our No. 1 potato-producing county in New England. Does that, perchance, have anything to do with our own Federal support-price program?"

Strubinger admitted it did. A recent report from Maine, he said, "advises us that there is a tremendous amount of smuggling and attempted smugglings, and that apparently it is done to bring the potatoes in and sell them under the support program. Next year, when the potato season starts we will assign additional men to Maine to eliminate as much of it as possible.

"With the tremendous extent of land border up there, it is a pretty hard proposition to eliminate it entirely."

Legal imports of potatoes will run 10 percent above last year's 10 million bushels, the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations predicted last night.

In the first four months of the potato season, September, October, November and December, in 1948 duty was paid on 5,080,000 bushels. In the same months in 1949 imports totaled 5,600,000 bushels. Potato imports are continuing heavy in January and February. Canadian shippers can pay inspection charges of $5 a car and a duty of 75 cents a 100-pound sack and still sell potatoes in this country from 15 to 20 cents a sack below domestic potatoes.

Agriculture officials spiked a rumor that hams imported from Poland were taking the domestic market away from home-grown hogs. This was raised in the House last week by Representative Charles B. Hoeven (R., Iowa). Records show that only 1,090,000 pounds of Polish hams were imported in 1949, as compared with an average of 22 million before the war.

"We also want to r ember," an official of OFAR said, "that last year we shipped about nine million pounds of lard to Poland and 34 million to Yugoslavia, and 1½ million to Hungary."

OFAR pointed out too, that last year about half a million pounds of potatoes were shipped by Western growers—Oregon, Washington, Idaho, etc., into western Canada. This is expected to increase, slightly this year.

Maritime Commission Believed Slated for Early Reorganization

The Maritime Commission, as it is now constituted, is on its last legs. Officials there say they have excellent reason to believe the President soon will propose a reorganization to include:

1. Transfer of Maritime's operating functions to the Commerce Department.

2. Abolition of the present five-man commission to be replaced by either a three-man shipping board, or a one-man operation. Whatever would be set up as a successor to the commission would merely fix shipping policies. The agency would have no operating chores.

The Hoover Commission, a year ago, recommended substantially this plan to both the President and the Congress.

The Maritime shift would be a first step in the remaking of the Commerce Department into a center of Federal transportation functions. At one time it was planned also to shift the Coast Guard and the operating functions of both the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Civil Aeronautics Board to Commerce along with those of Maritime. This proposal is now reported to have either been killed or indefinitely delayed.

STORY: A Federal worker was asked at a loyalty board hearing why he had once joined the Communist Party. He weighed his words carefully as he gave this explanation:

"I was mad at my wife. I came home one day unexpectedly and found her in the arms of another man. I didn't say a word to them at the time. I walked out of my house and went to the Communist headquarters and joined up."

CONVENTION: The National Association of Quartermen and Leadingmen is opening a two-day convention here today at the Ambassador Hotel. About 60 delegates from 34 chapters in various naval establishments throughout the U. S., Hawaii, and the Philippines will attend. Top Navy officials and members of Congress will attend a banquet tonight in the Ambassador.

STUDY: The field operations of three Federal agencies will be surveyed by a private management firm under a contract to be let by the Budget Bureau.

The study could have a direct effect on Federal employes here as it will go into the type of Government work that should be carried on outside of this city. It could result in further decentralization of Federal activities here over a period of years.

The three representative Federal agencies to be used as "guinea pigs" in the study are: Labor Department, (it has a small field operation) Federal Security Agency, (the representatives of medium field operations), and the Commerce Department, which has a large field force.

The locations of field offices and whether they should be centralized in certain cities or areas and the entire problem of field administration will be among the problems to be studied.

Federal officials are agreed that substantial savings could be made if field operations of one or more agencies could be centralized in various cities. It isn't unusual for Agriculture, for example, to have a dozen different offices in a single city—all in different locations.

GSA-BEC: The Budget Bureau also is about ready to okay management studies of the new General Services Agency and the Bureau of Employes Compensation, an agency in the Federal Security Agency.

The GSA survey will look into the possibility of transferring tons of little-used records of other Government agencies to GSA. It could result in the recommendation for the establishment of Federal record centers—records of all agencies—in key cities.

The BEC study will deal with its administration and operations.

The studies are financed from the million-dollar fund Congress gave the President last year to improve Government administration.

Kensington Couple, Sweethearts of 1888 Valentine Day, Celebrate 62d Anniversary

Rev. and Mrs. Clark Given Party by Members of Family

It won't take a Valentine to remind the Rev. and Mrs. John D. Clark of the importance of the day they plan to celebrate Tuesday.

On a day traditionally observed as "sweetheart day," the retired Baptist minister and his wife will mark their sixty-second wedding anniversary in their home at 3316 Lincoln ave., Kensington, Md. Their long, happy journey along the marital trail has produced seven children (five of whom are still living), 16 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Because "it's easier to get together on Sunday," the occasion was celebrated yesterday with a small, informal family gathering at the Clark home. Relatives found the couple hale and hearty and "apparently just as happy as the day they were married."

Woodwork His Hobby

The Rev. Mr. Clark, now 84, proudly displayed samples of inlaid woodwork which has occupied his time in his basement workshop since his retirement two years ago. His wife, a year younger, found a source of pride of her own in the loving attentions from her children and grandchildren.

The Clarks were married in Hamilton, Ontario, February 14, 1888. Soon afterward they moved to Philadelphia, where he entered Temple University to study for the ministry.

During his long career the Rev. Mr. Clark held pastorates in Pennsylvania, Maryland and New Jersey, the last two at Towson and Sater's, Md. He also served 15 years as an instructor in pattern making at Polytechnic High School, Baltimore.

They have lived in Kensington about two years.

Three Children Visit

Present yesterday were three of their children: The Rev. Edward O. Clark, pastor of the Chevy Chase Baptist Church here; Albert J. Clark, a patent attorney, of New York City, and Mrs. Harold Kinkade, of Williamsport, Pa. Two other sons, Russell H. Clark of Chicago and Earl K. Clark of Baltimore, were unable to attend.

A highlight of the celebration was the cutting of a cake baked by Mrs. Clark's sister, Mrs. Charles Meeker, of Bloomington, Ill., who attended their wedding in Hamilton 62 years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Chatelain, sr., on golden anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Chatelain, Sr. Feted on 50th Anniversary

A husband who treats her "almost like a baby" is the golden key to 50 years of happy married life, declared Mrs. Leon Chatelain, sr., as she and Mr. Chatelain celebrated their wedding anniversary last night at the Mayflower Hotel.

She told her guests, "with the fine family and friends I have, I wouldn't mind celebrating a few more anniversaries, now that the fiftieth is here."

Mr. and Mrs Chatelain were born in Switzerland. Mr. Chatelain, a tailor, came to New York in 1899 and a few months later sent for his sweetheart. They were married almost as soon as she stepped off the boat, according to Mr. Chatelain.

Now that Mr. Chatelain has retired, they live quietly at their home at 4124 Edmunds st. nw.

Panel Debates Civil Rights In Democracy

Representatives of the three major faiths gathered with members of the Young Adult Council at Howard University yesterday to attack the problem of "The Ethical and Religious Basis of Human Rights."

The panel discussion featured the closing day of the three-day conference attended by 75 delegates representing national youth organizations.

For over three hours, in a previously scheduled two-hour session, both speakers and members debated problems of civil rights in a democracy, actually the theme of the conference.

Among the various views expressed by panel speakers:

Emery M. Foster, former national chairman of the Unitarian Laymen's League: "Civil rights is the responsibility of the church, our religious duty. They are the teaching of Christ."

Rabbi Hymen Ezra Cohen, president of the Washington Board of Rabbis: "You don't have any rights unless society recognizes them. You get these rights b. your own right arm."

Dr. John J. O'Connor, professor of history at Georgetown University and secretary of the Catholic Interracial Council: "It is most important to create the climate where human rights can flourish."

Dr. William A. Banner, associate teacher of church history at Howard University: "The individual should be convinced there is a foundation for certain privileges and rights which are everyone's birthright."

Leo Brady to Speak

Leo Brady, assistant professor of speech and drama at Catholic University, will discuss contemporary theater at 8 p. m. today, at the St. Peter Claver Center, 1513 U st. nw.

Ailing Man, 74, Succumbs to Revolver Shot

While his wife and doctor son were in one part of his home yesterday afternoon, police reported, an elderly Washingtonian fatally shot himself in the head with a .32-caliber revolver.

Deputy Coroner Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg said the dead man was David Derzavitz, 74, of 5323 Connecticut ave. nw.

A certificate of suicide will be issued, Dr. Rosenberg reported. No notes were found, he said.

Homicide detectives said Derzavitz shot himself about 3:30 in an upstairs bedroom while his wife and son, Dr. Jack L. Derzavis, were downstairs.

The man was pronounced dead by Dr. Isidore Shulman, who had been treating him for heart and blood pressure conditions, police said.

Derzavitz, a former hardware merchant who retired in 1930 because of ill health, is also survived by a daughter, Mrs. Ruth Bachrach, 5435 31st st. nw. and four grandchildren.

Cancer Victim Found Hanging From Swing

A 63-year-old woman was found hanging by the chain of a child's swing yesterday afternoon on the back porch of her home, police said.

The victim was Mrs. Vincenza Totaro, of 1212 Ingraham st. nw. Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg said he will issue a certificate of suicide.

Several notes, in Italian, were left by Mrs. Totaro in a bedroom, Dr. Rosenberg reported. He said he was told the woman had been under treatment for cancer.

Homicide detectives said Mrs. Totaro's daughter, Mrs. Constance Saunders, with whom she lived, discovered her about 2 p. m. The chain was not detached from the swing or from its overhead fixture, but was wrapped around the victim's neck, according to police.

Man Admits Nine Thefts From Homes

Trapped in Store, He Runs Directly Into Hands of Waiting Policemen

Police yesterday placed a charge of housebreaking against a man they arrested Saturday night, allegedly breaking out of a grocery. They said he confessed nine other housebreakings in the past two months.

The defendant is Burell A. Baylor, 22, of 1145 23d st. ne.

Police said they received a report about 9 p. m. of a prowler in a grocery at 1612 L st. nw. A 3d Precinct scout car went to the front of the place, and Detective Sergts. R. C. Schwab and Jack Frost went to the rear.

Police said that as the scout car arrived, Baylor broke out the front door of the grocery, ran around to the rear and into the arms of Schwab and Frost.

Baylor had originally entered the store through a rear window, police said. He obtained nothing in the store, but police said the other housebreakings recently have netted him several hundred dollars. He will face a hearing in Municipal Court today.

Gang Assaults Bus Driver In Northeast

Police were searching yesterday for a gang of about eight youths who assaulted and robbed a Capital Transit Co. bus driver late Saturday night.

The victim was Charles Dixon, 23, of 5496 N. Kent rd., Arlington. He told police he picked them up at 8th and H sts. ne. He said that when the bus was on Kenilworth ave. ne. near Hayes st. ne., the boys, the only passengers aboard, began to slug him.

He managed to stop the vehicle, he said, and began to defend himself with a fire extinguisher. The boys then fled with his coin changer, containing about $25. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for bruises and released.

Man Arrested Again on Narcotic Count

William Henry (Cheeko) Smith, 21, who is under a three-year suspended sentence for narcotic law violation, was back in jail yesterday. He was held by police for the United States Marshal's office.

Saturday afternoon, Police Pvts. L. B. Anderson and T. B. O'Bryant saw Smith in a transaction with two other men in the 1100 block of 7th st. nw. They knew Smith, they said, and stopped to check on him.

As they did, they said, the other two men fled. A search of Smith, police said, revealed drug equipment. He gave his address as 1231 7th st. nw. Smith was indicted last October in one of a series of narcotics cases made here during a "crackdown" on violators.

Cornell Club Smoker

The Cornell Club of Washington will hold a football smoker Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the Dodge Hotel, 1st and E sts. nw. Movies of the 1949 football season will be shown and Lou Conti, Cornell, assistant coach, will speak.

12 Flee 3-Alarm Fire; 2 Apartment Houses Damaged on P St. N.W.

None Injured, Blaze Loss in One of Buildings Set at $15,000

At least a dozen persons were made homeless early yesterday by a three-alarm fire that heavily damaged two apartment buildings at 2024 and 2026 P st. nw. No one was injured in the pre-dawn blaze.

One man who escaped with his wife was Marshall Morgan. He was rescued in another fire in the 2026 P st. building on January 30, 1949, when his previous wife was fatally burned.

Firemen said the blaze started in a second-floor apartment at 2026. It went upward through walls and an airshaft to the attic and roof, then burned across into the roof and attic of 2024 before it was controlled by firemen.

R. B. Dodson of the Carey Winston Co., realtors, of 739 15th st. nw., who own the 2026 structure, estimated damage in that building at $15,000 or more. No estimate was available on the other structure, operated by the Jack Hayes real estate office.

The first alarm came by telephone to the Fire Department at 5:22 a. m., and a box alarm came two minutes later.

Lieut. Charles Laschalt of the fire marshal's office, began an investigation of the blaze. He said there were indications it started through a smoker's carelessness.

Ralph McKee, in whose apartment the fire is said to have originated, said he awoke to find his entire front room in flames. He told Lieutenant Laschalt that he made his way through a window to an outside balcony, then crossed to a balcony outside a window at 2024 P st. and got downstairs there.

At the 2024 P st. building, Mr. and Mrs. P. K. Narain and their two small children, and at least one other tenant, were forced out. Mr. Narain is connected with the Embassy of India.

Residents of the two buildings, clad in light night attire, slippers and hastily-donned overgarments, mingled with the large crowd from the area which had been roused by the din of fire apparatus arriving.

Police rerouted traffic around the four residential blocks adjoining the blaze site—although one Capital Transit bus, eastbound on P st. and carrying a lone passenger—was caught within the fire lines between 21st and 22nd sts. and marooned there for some time.

Lieutenant Laschalt said he will continue his investigation today.

From Texas

D. C. to Have Some Foul Weather

Today's meteorological theme song, the Weather Bureau said, will be "Stormy Weather."

The District forecast calls for occasional rain, cloudiness, and fresh easterly winds.

Stemming from a storm in Texas, the rains were to hit Washington early today. After an overnight low of 40 degrees, today's high will be about 45, the bureau added.

Yesterday's weather reversed the forecast. Instead of predicted rain, the day dawned clear but grew progressively cloudy through the afternoon.

With mild temperatures prevailing—the high was 54 at 4 p. m.; the low 35 at 6:35 a. m.—"good crowds" were reported at the Zoo and around Washington's tourist circuit.

Trial of Soldier In Paris Slaying To Continue Here

Court martial proceedings against Pfc. Stanley F. Edelbaum, 20, accused of strangling a young woman in a Paris hotel room last May, will reconvene at 10 a. m. Tuesday at Bolling Air Force Base.

The adjournment from Weisbaden, Germany, to Washington was made in order to hear testimony on the sanity of the Brooklyn, N. Y., youth after two doctors testified he was unable to distinguish right from wrong.

Edelbaum, formerly a member of the Air Force band at Weisbaden, allegedly choked to death Elizabeth Borik, 20.

Area to Get Evangelism By Doorbell

4000 Protestant Workers Planning Home Visitations

More than 200 persons yesterday met at First Baptist Church, 16th and O sts. nw., for a final "briefing" before embarking on a one-week program of visitation evangelism.

At the same time, workers were gathered in seven other churches in Greater Washington to make final preparations for the home visitation program.

Beginning tonight and continuing through Thursday night more than 4000 workers from 191 Protestant churches in Washington and nearby Virginia and Maryland plan to visit thousands of people to ask them to "make the decision to accept Christ and become a part of His church."

The program of home visitation is one phase of a nation-wide, 15-month program of evangelism. Locally it is sponsored by the Evangelism Committee of the Washington Federation of Churches, headed by the Rev. Ward B. Hurlburt.

Discussion Periods

Before going out for the three-hour period of visitation each night, workers will meet at their churches for a brief supper and discussion period. Afterward, many will return to the church to discuss their evening's success.

Visitors will travel in teams of two, and will be armed with "responsibility lists" containing the names of possible church membership prospects.

Names on the list were placed there because they have appeared on the church rolls for some reason—their children may be in a Bible school, the couple may have been married in the church, or a member of the family may have visited the church pastor.

Others were learned of through a city-wide religious census carried on by more than 150 churches last month.

Laymen Effective

At yesterday's meeting at First Baptist Church, Dr. H. H. McConnell of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, head of the program, declared that laymen can do the job of evangelism more effectively than ministers.

People tend to feel ill-at-ease with a minister, but will talk freely to a layman, he said.

The vast majority of those who will be approached, he said, have had some church experience and will welcome workers into their homes. Many are anxious to come into a church, but have delayed action and are simply waiting to be asked to join in its fellowship, he said.

2 Boys Thrown, Robbed By Gang of Youths

Richard Rappa, 11, of 5812 6th st. nw., and Daniel DeFabio, 8, of 5817 6th st. nw., were thrown to the ground and robbed by seven other boys yesterday in the 3900 block of Minnesota ave. ne., police reported.

The Rappa boy was robbed of 50 cents in change and a $5 bill which, police said, he carried with him since his grandmother gave it to him for a Christmas present. His companion was robbed of two religious medals given him by his mother yesterday.

Red Cross Meeting

Key members of the residential division of the 1950 Washington area Red Cross campaign will hold their first meeting Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. at the home of the division chairman, Mrs. James T. Berryman, 6633 32d pl. nw.

Leeman Hails 'Rule' Support In Congress

Herbert P. Leeman, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations yesterday said he feels the "important congressional support recently developed for the home rule bill will have a decisive effect.

"I feel this support will be sufficient to convince enough members of the House to sign the discharge petition to bring the Kefauver bill to a vote," Leeman said. The petition has 135 of the necessary signatures.

The important support Leeman referred to was the decision of Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.), a member of the strong Rules Comittee, to sign the petition, and an appeal for signatures by five Democratic members of the House District Committee.

Speaking at a valentine party held by the American Business Association in the Shoreham Hotel, Leeman said it was appropriate to speak of home rule on the birthday of the man who cherished government by the people.

Of the Kefauver bill, Leeman said it is not generally understood the bill provides for a referendum before home rule can take effect.

Police Rescue Two Reluctant Young 'Tars'

Boys Adventuring On Potomac in Frail Skiff Saved

Two young District "sailors" yielded reluctantly to authority yesterday in a mid-Potomac rescue which police said averted an "almost certain disaster."

Harold Brand, 14, 1324 Vermont ave. nw., and Fred Parker, 14, 23 U st., were removed very much against their will to the safety of a Harbor Police cruiser from a frail plywood dinghy in which they were paddling upstream—unaware of their danger.

Although the boys insisted they were "getting along fine," police said, every stroke of their makeshift paddles was an invitation to death.

"If that boat had turned 10 inches either way in the face of the current, it would have been swamped," according to Pvt. C. E. Ripperger, who executed the "rescue" along with Pvt. William Hayden.

When police reached the pier, their boat was only a short distance from a point where a combination of high tide and swift current would have made the rickety craft uncontrollable, Ripperger said.

Police said they received a call at 4:15 p. m. from a National Airport policeman, who reported the boys were afloat in Georgetown Channel near the railroad bridge in a boat that "wouldn't be safe for anyone, much less kids." Fortunately, a patrol boat was in the vicinity and reached the boys in a few minutes.

Harold and Fred said they found the boat floating near the Virginia shore opposite Roosevelt Island and "just decided to take a trip." They fashioned paddles from wooden boards and had covered about four miles when police intervened.

After removing the boys to the police craft, police towed their rowboat ashore. At the Harbor Precinct the young "guests" were given an armful of comic books to occupy them until arrival of their parents.

Says Archbishop

No Neutral Ground in God's War

Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, imprisoned Roman Catholic primate of Hungary, stands as a "monumental example" of the total war raging between the forces of atheism and Christianity, the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle said yesterday.

Archbishop O'Boyle spoke at a confirmation service for 384 adults at St. Matthews' Cathedral, 1735 Rhode Island ave. nw.

Cardinal Mindszenty, "the last barrier between the evil usurpers and the degradation of his nation," was imprisoned for life a year ago this week by the Hungarian Communists, Archbishop O'Boyle said.

"His trial stands as the permanent indication of those who condemned him in a mockery of justice, which revolted the hardened conscience of the world," the Washington prelate said.

In the strife between the forces of atheism and those who believe in God, there can be no neutrality, and "no room for contented mediocrity or wavering decision," he said.

The archbishop declared that the atheism against which battle rages is "not now simply a matter of an atheism which denies or disregards God in personal and national life," but an atheism which "outrightly wars upon the Lord and His Christ."

"It is a Communist illusion that the issues of this war are economic," he said, and "a democratic delusion that they are political."

"It is a widespread, and sometimes malevolently nurtured, deception that the issues are dogmatic as between a specific government and the Catholic Church," he continued.

"The plain blunt fact remains that the conflict rages between a society based on the dignity and inalienable liberties of man, and a society where these immunities and privileges of human nature are wantonly desecrated and denied," Archbishop O'Boyle declared.

Methodist Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, 83, former head of the Washington area of the Methodist Church, died yesterday morning at Sibley Hospital.

Bishop Hughes had been in the hospital suffering from pneumonia since January 30.

One of the outstanding preachers of his denomination, Bishop Hughes was active as a speaker in Washington and throughout the country until his last illness.

He became ill after delivering a series of lectures early in January at Muncie, Ind.

Although officially retired as a bishop in 1940 after serving four 8-year terms, Bishop Hughes was twice recalled to active service to take the place of bishops who died.

Since the death of his wife in 1938, Bishop Hughes had made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Walter S. Harban, 691 Rollingwood dr., Chevy Chase, Md.

The son of a Methodist minister, he was born in Moundsville, W. Va., on December 7, 1866. A brother, the late Matthew Simpson Hughes, was also a bishop in the Methodist Church.

After serving pastorates in Newton, Iowa and Malden, Mass., he became president of DePauw University, Greencastle, Ind., in 1903.

He had been a Methodist bishop since 1908 when he served his first term as bishop of the San Francisco area of the church. Later he served terms as bishop of Boston, Chicago, and, from 1932 to 1940, Washington.

In 1943, at 77, he was named temporary successor to Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, of Washington, who was killed in an air crash in Iceland. He held that post until appointment of Bishop Charles Wesley Flint in 1944.

Later he served as Episcopal head of the Wisconsin area for about six months in 1947, following the death of Bishop Ernest G. Richardson.

During his lifetime, Bishop Hughes was active in working for unification of the three branches of the Methodist Church. He was also an active worker and former president of the Board of Temperance.

Bishop Hughes had lectured widely at colleges and universities throughout the country. In 1923, he was acting president of Boston University, and later served several times as acting president of American University in Washington.

He was a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, and had attended West Virginia University and Iowa College. He held honorary degrees from Ohio Wesleyan, Boston University, Syracuse University, DePauw, and the University of Maine.

He was the author of a number of books, including his autobiography, "I Was a Minister," published in 1943.

In addition to the daughter with whom he made his home, Bishop Hughes is survived by another daughter, Mrs. William H. Remy of Indianapolis, three sons, Dr. Edwin H. Hughes, jr., Paul Smiths, N. Y., Ebbert M. Hughes of San Marino, Cal., and Francis M. Hughes of Indianapolis, nine grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Funeral services will be at 2 p. m. Tuesday at Foundry Methodist Church, 16th and P sts. nw. They will be conducted by Bishop Francis J. McConnell of New York, assisted by Bishops Charles W. Flint, Wilbur E. Hammaker, James H. Straughn, and the Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Church, and the Rev. Dr. Clifford Homer Richmond, pastor of Chevy Chase Methodist Church.

Burial will be in Greencastle, Ind.

Donald Stukey, Public Health Official, Dies

Donald Larry Stukey, 40, United States Public Health Service supervisor of venereal disease investigators for Maryland, died Saturday at St. Agnes Hospital, Baltimore, from injuries he received in an automobile accident on Wednesday.

Mr. Stukey, who lived at 5912 Landover rd., Cheverly, Md., was driving from his Baltimore office to the Public Health Service clinic in Laurel, Md., when a truck collided with his car head-on about 3 miles north of Laurel on U. S. Route 1.

A native of Tekamah, Nebr., he came to Washington in 1942 to join the Office of Censorship after attending the University of Denver.

He became a junior administrative assistant in that agency, and when it was abolished at the end of the war he joined the Public Health Service. After some two years of service in the headquarters office, he was assigned to the Maryland field office.

A member of the Ninth Street Christian Church, 9th and D sts. ne., he was active in the married couples' club there. He was also a member of the Happy Hicks, a hillbilly band which frequently entertained patients of various veterans' hospitals in the area.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Wednesday at the Ninth Street Church. Interment will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Loyce Gooch Stukey; a 5-year-old son, William Marshall Stukey; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Delaney Stukey of 3801 13th st. N., Arlington, Va., and a brother, Leonard C. Stukey of Fairfax, Va.

Mrs. Rosella Wisner

Mrs. Rosella B. Wisner, 69, a resident of Montgomery County for 28 years, died yesterday at her home, 301 Indian Spring dr., Silver Spring, following a heart attack.

The widow of G. Franklin Wisner, press relations chief for the Federal Communications Commission who died in 1940. She was an active member of the Takoma Park Woman's Club and Grace Episcopal Church.

Born in Baltimore, she lived in Takoma Park for eight years, before moving to Silver Spring in 1931.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Gordon S. Parker, of the Indian Spring dr. address, and a brother, E. P. Boteler, of Baltimore.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 1 p. m. at the Warner Pumphrey Funeral Home, 8434 Georgia ave., Silver Spring. Burial will be in Druid Ridge Cemetery, Baltimore.

Lucas Predicts Free Poland At Ceremony for Kosciusko

The ideals of liberty of Thaddeus Kosciusko, whose 204th birthday passed yesterday, live on in the aims of the Marshall Plan and the Atlantic Pact, Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) said yesterday.

These peaceful, united efforts of the democracis are in keeping with th Polish patriot's dream of "a free Poland playing its part in a free world," Lucas said.

Tht Senator was one of four Congressmen who spoke at ceremonies before the Kosciusko monument in Lafayette Park. The celebration was sponsored by Polish-American civic and cultural organizations in the Washington area.

Through the United Nations, the Marshall Plan, the Atlantic Pact and related activities, Lucas said, "we are proving that we can meet force with firmness."

These measures, he said, will ultimately restore liberty to Poland and "other captive nations," as Soviet leaders realize that force is hopeless.

Other Congressmen who eulogized the memory of the Polish military engineer who became a hero of the American Revolution were Representative Alvin E. O'Konski (R., Wis.), Representative Barratt O'Hara (D., Ill.), and Representative Chester A. Chesney (D., Ill.).

"If Kosciusko were alive today," O'Konski said, "he would be proud of his native land for its courage and sacrifice in the last war."

O'Hara described the will of the Polish "engineering genius, perhaps the greatest master of the use and tactics of artillery of his day."

Appointing Thomas Jefferson his executor, Kosciusko authorized the use of his estate to buy slaves, set them free and "instruct them for their new condition."

Among the groups taking part were the Polish-American Congress, the Polish Club of Washington, the Polish Women's Alliance, the District Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, and the District Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and the national honor guard of the American Legion.

Nation-wide Kosciusko Day services were sponsored by the congress, which represents six million Polish-Americans dedicated to the restoration of a free and independent Poland.

Tilman Parks Dies; Former Congressman From Arkansas

Tilman Bacon Parks, 77, Congressman from Arkansas for 16 years, died yesterday at Suburban Hospital in Bethesda after a short illness.

Mr. Parks

Mr. Parks had made his home in Washington for 30 years, serving eight consecutive terms in the House of Representatives until his retirement in 1936. From 1926, following the death of his wife, until 1944, he lived with his son, Tilman B. Parks, jr., at 1416 20th st., but for the last six years he had been a patient at the Washington Home for Incurables.

Born on a plantation near Lewisville, Ark., Mr. Parks was the son of the late William Parks who, as a captain at the age of 16, was reputed to be the youngest commissioned officer in the Confederate army.

Mr. Parks attended both the University of Texas and the University of Virginia, and was admitted to the Arkansas bar in 1900. Before his election to Congress, he served three terms in the Arkansas Legislature and was prosecuting attorney for the Eighth Judicial District of Arkansas for four years.

He was a Mason, a member of Sigma Chi fraternity and a member of the Baptist Church.

Besides the son with whom he lived, Mr. Parks is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Ann Parks Marshall, of Chicago, and Mrs. Josephine Pugh, of Kenosha, Wisc., and three grandchildren.

His body is at Suburban Hospital pending completion of funeral arrangements, which will be made today.

Victor Boatner Dies; U. S. Railway Adviser

Chicago, Feb. 12 (AP).—Victor V. Boatner, 68, former president of the Chicago Great Western Railroad and a railway consultant for the last five years, died here yesterday.

In 1934 Mr. Boatner was appointed director of regional coordination under Joseph B. Eastman, Federal coordinator of railroads, and in 1942, he was appointed chief of railway transport for the Office of Defense Transportation.

Survivors include his widow, three sisters and a brother.

Funeral services will be held in Chicago Tuesday.

John Wells Passes Away In Church

John Berkeley Wells, 59, Washington architect, passed away suddenly yesterday while attending services at the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Church of Christ, Scientist.

A native of Newton, Mass., and an Air Corps veteran of World War I, Mr. Wells lived at 4182 Middlesex la., Bethesda, Md.

He was educated in Boston, Mass., and was a practicing architect in Baltimore for 20 years before he came to Washington to practice 10 years ago.

Funeral arrangements are awaiting the arrival of Mr. Wells' son, First Lieut. John B. Wells 3d, U. S. A., from his station at Cristobal, Panama.

Other survivors include Mr. Wells' widow, the former Adelaide Reardon of Baltimore; two daughters, Miss Mary Pierce Bruns, San Francisco, Calif.; and Miss Emilie R. Wells, of the home address; a sister, Miss Eleanor F. Wells, of the home addres; a sister, Miss Eleanor F. Wells, Englewood, N. J., and a brother, Arthur K. Wells, Wellesley, Mass.

ANNE

Bride Who Equips Her Kitchen With Just a Can Opener Likely to End By Writing Haworth Instead of Anne

EVER know a bride who equipped her kitchen with only a can opener?

You've heard of her, I know—in jokes and gags. But judging from letters we receive, newlyweds are highly anxious to have their kitchens properly outfitted for a good job of cooking. Here is one example.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you give me a basic list of utensils needed in preparing daily meals for two people?

Since I am to be married soon, some friends are plannig a kitchen shower for me. They have made the very nice suggestion that I provide a list of what I want so I won't wind up with a lot of duplicates and gadgets. T. L. L.

DEAR T. L. L.:

Here's a list of rock-bottom needs for the well-equipped kitchen. Many additions could be made. Among those you'd enjoy would be an automatic toaster and a pressure saucepan. But if you start out with every item listed below, you're equipped for any emergency:

Ten-inch skillet; 1½-quart saucepan; 2-quart double boiler (can be used for 2-quart saucepan, too); 4-quart Dutch oven or covered saucepan; 4- or 6-cup percolator (preferably both); 2 casseroles, muffin pans, 2 layer cake pans, 2 pie pans, deep oblong cake pan or loaf pan, cookie sheet, angel cake pan, tea kettle.

Nest of mixing bowls, cutting board, standard measuring cups, large strainer, small strainer, hand juicer, meat grinder, rolling pin, slotted spoon, regular mixing spoon, long-handled fork; spatula, pancake turner, set of cutlery (3-inch paring knife, 5-inch utility knife, 8-inch steak knife, 9-inch roast slicer or butcher knife, plus others desired), rotary egg beater, flour sifter, biscuit cutter, measuring spoons, can opener, vegetable cleaning brush, potato peeler, potato masher, colander, grater.

DEAR ANNE:

We have recently completed a rambling white house with black roof and black shutters. I plan to buy awnings for our two front windows, one 15 feet wide and the other 13 feet.

After looking through a very popular catalogue, I find only green awnings. I was planning to purchase black. Do you think the black would be better taste and worth looking for? Or would that be too much black? What color would you suggest? C. W. A.

DEAR C. W. A.:

Although you can have black awnings made by any of several Washington firms, they are rarely used on homes. It strikes me the effect would be rather dead and drab on your white and black house, especially since the awnings will be so large.

Awnings usually make a gay addition to the summery atmosphere of a house, so I believe I'd introduce a little color. You may want to avoid a bold stripe because of the size of the windows. However, I've seen several pieces of striped material which should be attractive—a restrained black, white and green stripe, for instance, or a tiny black and persimmon stripe. Then there's always black and white stripes or black and silver stripe if you want to stay away from color but avoid drabness.

Dear M. M. D.:

Somebody has done something about mismated feet! In fact, there's a National Odd Shoe Exchange.

After seeing your letter about your problem in "Ask Anne" last Wednesday, readers R. B. F., F. L. P., and E. McQ., wrote and gave me the following address. They found it in the February, 1950, Woman's Day.

Mrs. Clark to Be Lone Woman Banquet Speaker

Mrs. Georgia Neese Clark, Treasurer of the United States, will be the woman speaker at the Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner at the National Guard Armory Thursday. Charles Luckman, chairman of the dinner committee who will preside that evening, will defer to Mrs. O. Max Gardner, co-chairman, in the introduction of the only woman speaker of the evening.

Mrs. Gardner's official duties will make her a hostess in absentia at a cocktail party earlier in the day. Entertaining for a group of visitors from her home State of North Carolina, Mrs. Gardner will be attending a pre-dinner reception for President Truman and Mrs. Truman, Vice President and Mrs. Barkley and other high ranking officials.

Dignitaries at Table

Other parties preceding the dinner will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Spenser Love and Representative and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr.

At the head table with the President and Vice President and their wives will be Cabinet officers and their wives, and the Governors of Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, New Mexico, North Carolina, Rhode Island and Tennessee.

'Belles of Democracy'

Pink and white camellias will be flown from California for the "Belles of Democracy" who will assist at the dinner. Daughters of leading Democrats of the Washington area, the belles this year will include.

Miss Anne Beth Alves and Mrs. Horace Busby, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Alves; Miss Nancy Anderson, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Clinton Anderson; Miss Cornelia Ball and Miss Sally Ball, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John Ball; Miss Jane Blythe, daughter of Mrs. Joe Blythe; Miss Zilpha Bosone, daughter of Representative Reva Beck Bosone; Miss Julia Bowdoin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Foley, jr.; Miss Barbara Boyle and Miss Jean Boyle, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Boyle, jr.

Also, Miss Julia Bruce, daughter of Mrs. Curtis Shears; Miss Diane Carroll, daughter of Representative and Mrs. John A. Carroll; Miss Rose Caudle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Lamar Caudle; Miss Joyce Clifford and Miss Margery Clifford, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Clifford; Miss Agnes Carol Deane, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Charles B. Deane; Miss Sara Denton, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Winfield K. Denton and others.

Fitted Shortcoats Top the New Suits

Shortcoats are so perfect to wear over suits that they have become an integral part of the suit-loving, American woman's wardrobe. In fact, they are affectionately nicknamed "shorties"—sure proof of their popular standing.

The spring 1950 shortcoats have a trim new look achieved by a back belt that starts from quite far forward on each side thus giving the front a fitted effect. Smartest fabrics are fine fleeces, the new featherweight chinchillas, and monotone tweeds.

Friendship Festive Spot Again

By Marie McNair

FRIENDSHIP, setting for some of Washington's most brilliant parties, has been reborn.

The rambling white house on Georgetown's R st., owned by the late Mrs. Edward B. McLean, has new occupants now. It's been divided into three separate establishments, with Mrs. Harold Walker in the central unit where she entertained at cocktails yesterday.

Little remains of the Friendship of yesteryear. It's freshly white inside and out and, where the late President Harding's portrait once hung over the mantel, Mrs. Walker has placed a three-paneled gilt mirror. Gold and soft green brocades frame the windows which look out onto the green terraced garden.

Mrs. Walker and her sister, Baroness von Schoen, who was there to assist, wore graceful black velvet gowns with skirts which swept into brief trains. Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Mrs. Walker's daughter, was also there in a short black frock and wearing her famous black pearls—necklace, earrings and ring, all sparkling in diamond settings.

It was Gen. Omar Bradley's birthday yesterday and Mrs. Bradley had the responsibility of getting the general home in time for a small dinner party to celebrate the event. Wearing a gay red dinner gown, Mrs. Bradley had dressed it up with a lei of fresh pikaki flowers which looked like carved ivory and sent an exotic fragrance through the room.

Diplomatic Group Meets at Party

THE Swedish Ambassador, Erik Boheman, talked with Thomas Bell Sweeney in the dining room, while Mme. Boheman, with a platinum fox over her shoulders, chatted with Mme. Vladimir Rybar about mutual London friends.

The Ecuador Ambassador Augusto Dillon, who's going to parties alone these days, expects to have Senora de Dillon well enough to join him in a couple of days. The Iran Ambassador, Hussein Ala, slipped quietly in and out and Mme. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, took a chair beside Mme. Prochnik who was at the tea table set up in the drawing room.

Among others there were the Spanish Ambassador-at-large and Senora de Lecquerica; Senator Homer Ferguson and Mrs. Ferguson who topped her dark costume with a soft gray feather hat; Senator and Mrs. Tom Connally; Mrs. Henry Milmore and Mrs. James Helm in a corner conversation; Mrs. Henry Flood, an early caller; Mrs. Eldridge Jordan wearing her favorite white carnations, and Mme. van Kaathoven, who came together; Prince and Princess Pignatelli and Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Glover.

Bachelor Trio Among Guests

THE PRETTY GIRL in a pale pink hat was Mrs. John deSibour, the former Valerie Prochnik, and still others there were bachelors Pen Hogan, Pen Turner and Fred Roy; Mr. and Mrs. Constantine de Stackelberg; Aldace Walker, son of the hostess; Ralph Snowden Hill; Mrs. George Barnett; Mrs. McCook Knox wearing smart tweeds; Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, happy to say that her husband is on the mend after a serious illness and that they're planning a trip to Puerto Rico where Mr. Stoddard hopes to gather material for a new book.

Then there were Mrs. Davies Fitch and her mother, Mrs. Emlen Davies; the Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Echegaray; Mr. and Mrs. James L. Houghteling; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt (she's Mrs. Walker's sister) and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Montgomery, Mrs. Walker's next door neighbors.

Engaged Couples Kept On the Go

PRETTY Natalie Brown, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Paul Brown of Fairfax, and Lieut. Keith O'Keefe, USMC, who'll be married February 18, were honor guests at brunch yesterday, with Mr. and Mrs. Lisle Smith hosts at Spring Glade Farm, their home in nearby Virginia.

Members of the wedding party, who were the only other guests, sat down to Southern fried chicken and apple dumplings at a table decorated with a miniature bride and bridegroom, the bride in a satin wedding gown and tulle veil. Miss Brown and her attendants all found bridal bouquets of Sweetheart roses at their places.

Gerry Clifford, the Clark Gifford's daughter, who's studying music in all seriousness, played and sang for the group.

Another bride-to-be, Miss Patricia Moore, and her fiance, Capt. James Shanahan, who are being parted right up to their wedding day—February 18—were entertained at cocktails yesterday by Col. and Mrs. Kenneth Webber. Miss Moore is the daughter of Brig. Gen. James E. Moore.

On Saturday Miss Virginia Timberman, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Timberman's daughter, gave a buffet supper followed by dancing for the engaged couple.

Chapmans Begin Last Week's Round

MAJ. GEN. and Mrs. John A. Chapman — he's retiring head of the Australian Military Mission—put in another busy day saying their farewells yesterday.

Starting with a 10 o'clock breakfast, with the Attache of the Australian Embassy and Mrs. Wilson Ewart as hosts, General and Mrs. Chapman returned to the Statler, where they're staying until they leave on Wednesday, and were hosts to a few friends there at luncheon.

Yesterday afternoon Wing Commander William Townsend, Staff Officer of the Australian Joint Services Staff, and Mrs. Townsend gave a cocktail party for the Chapmans, with guests staying on for a buffet supper.

Mrs. Harriman Gives Tea Party

MRS. J. Borden Harriman, former American Minister to Norway, entertained at tea yesterday the National Board of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, in honor of Mrs. Annalee Stewart, president of the United States section of the league.

Diplomatic Set Festive Over Weekend

Other guests were the Guatemalan Counselor and Senora Linares, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Acheson, Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris and Senor Luza, famous Peruvian portrait painter.

And then there was a luncheon yesterday given by Mrs. Hume Wrong, wife of the Canadian Ambassador, for Arnold Smith, member of the Canadian delegation to U. N., and Mrs. Smith, here for the day from New York.

Tobe Says...

Fitted Shortcoats Top the New Suits

Shortcoats are so perfect to wear over suits that they have become an integral part of the suit-loving, American woman's wardrobe. In fact, they are affectionately nicknamed "shorties"—sure proof of their popular standing.

The spring 1950 shortcoats have a trim new look achieved by a back belt that starts from quite far forward on each side thus giving the front a fitted effect. Smartest fabrics are fine fleeces, the new featherweight chinchillas, and monotone tweeds.

Friendship Festive Spot Again

By Marie McNair

FRIENDSHIP, setting for some of Washington's most brilliant parties, has been reborn.

The rambling white house on Georgetown's R st., owned by the late Mrs. Edward B. McLean, has new occupants now. It's been divided into three separate establishments, with Mrs. Harold Walker in the central unit where she entertained at cocktails yesterday.

Little remains of the Friendship of yesteryear. It's freshly white inside and out and, where the late President Harding's portrait once hung over the mantel, Mrs. Walker has placed a three-paneled gilt mirror. Gold and soft green brocades frame the windows which look out onto the green terraced garden.

Mrs. Walker and her sister, Baroness von Schoen, who was there to assist, wore graceful black velvet gowns with skirts which swept into brief trains. Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Mrs. Walker's daughter, was also there in a short black frock and wearing her famous black pearls—necklace, earrings and ring, all sparkling in diamond settings.

It was Gen. Omar Bradley's birthday yesterday and Mrs. Bradley had the responsibility of getting the general home in time for a small dinner party to celebrate the event. Wearing a gay red dinner gown, Mrs. Bradley had dressed it up with a lei of fresh pikaki flowers which looked like carved ivory and sent an exotic fragrance through the room.

Diplomatic Group Meets at Party

THE Swedish Ambassador, Erik Boheman, talked with Thomas Bell Sweeney in the dining room, while Mme. Boheman, with a platinum fox over her shoulders, chatted with Mme. Vladimir Rybar about mutual London friends.

The Ecuador Ambassador Augusto Dillon, who's going to parties alone these days, expects to have Senora de Dillon well enough to join him in a couple of days. The Iran Ambassador, Hussein Ala, slipped quietly in and out and Mme. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, took a chair beside Mme. Prochnik who was at the tea table set up in the drawing room.

Among others there were the Spanish Ambassador-at-large and Senora de Lecquerica; Senator Homer Ferguson and Mrs. Ferguson who topped her dark costume with a soft gray feather hat; Senator and Mrs. Tom Connally; Mrs. Henry Milmore and Mrs. James Helm in a corner conversation; Mrs. Henry Flood, an early caller; Mrs. Eldridge Jordan wearing her favorite white carnations, and Mme. van Kaathoven, who came together; Prince and Princess Pignatelli and Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Glover.

Mrs. George Thorpe left to go to Mrs. McCeney Werlich's cocktail party; Admiral and Mrs. Emory Land were among those who stayed to find many old friends.

Bachelor Trio Among Guests

THE PRETTY GIRL in a pale pink hat was Mrs. John deSibour, the former Valerie Prochnik, and still others there were bachelors Pen Hogan, Pen Turner and Fred Roy; Mr. and Mrs. Constantine de Stackelberg; Aldace Walker, son of the hostess; Ralph Snowden Hill; Mrs. George Barnett; Mrs. McCook Knox wearing smart tweeds; Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, happy to say that her husband is on the mend after a serious illness and that they're planning a trip to Puerto Rico where Mr. Stoddard hopes to gather material for a new book.

Then there were Mrs. Davies Fitch and her mother, Mrs. Emlen Davies; the Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Echegaray; Mr. and Mrs. James L. Houghteling; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt (she's Mrs. Walker's sister) and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Montgomery, Mrs. Walker's next door neighbors.

Engaged Couples Kept On the Go

PRETTY Natalie Brown, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Paul Brown of Fairfax, and Lieut. Keith O'Keefe, USMC, who'll be married February 18, were honor guests at brunch yesterday, with Mr. and Mrs. Lisle Smith hosts at Spring Glade Farm, their home in nearby Virginia.

Members of the wedding party, who were the only other guests, sat down to Southern fried chicken and apple dumplings at a table decorated with a miniature bride and bridegroom, the bride in a satin wedding gown and tulle veil. Miss Brown and her attendants all found bridal bouquets of Sweetheart roses at their places.

Gerry Clifford, the Clark Gifford's daughter, who's studying music in all seriousness, played and sang for the group.

Another bride-to-be, Miss Patricia Moore, and her fiance, Capt. James Shanahan, who are being parted right up to their wedding day—February 18—were entertained at cocktails yesterday by Col. and Mrs. Kenneth Webber. Miss Moore is the daughter of Brig. Gen. James E. Moore.

On Saturday Miss Virginia Timberman, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Timberman's daughter, gave a buffet supper followed by dancing for the engaged couple.

Chapmans Begin Last Week's Round

MAJ. GEN. and Mrs. John A. Chapman — he's retiring head of the Australian Military Mission—put in another busy day saying their farewells yesterday.

Starting with a 10 o'clock breakfast, with the Attache of the Australian Embassy and Mrs. Wilson Ewart as hosts, General and Mrs. Chapman returned to the Statler, where they're staying until they leave on Wednesday, and were hosts to a few friends there at luncheon.

Yesterday afternoon Wing Commander William Townsend, Staff Officer of the Australian Joint Services Staff, and Mrs. Townsend gave a cocktail party for the Chapmans, with guests staying on for a buffet supper.

Mrs. Harriman Gives Tea Party

MRS. J. Borden Harriman, former American Minister to Norway, entertained at tea yesterday the National Board of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, in honor of Mrs. Annalee Stewart, president of the United States section of the league.

Diplomatic Set Festive Over Weekend

Other guests were the Guatemalan Counselor and Senora Linares, Mr. and Mrs. Ted Acheson, Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris and Senor Luza, famous Peruvian portrait painter.

And then there was a luncheon yesterday given by Mrs. Hume Wrong, wife of the Canadian Ambassador, for Arnold Smith, member of the Canadian delegation to U. N., and Mrs. Smith, here for the day from New York.

ATTENTION SUBDIVIDERS

If you are not a subdivider but you want to become one here is your opportunity to make several million dollars in a few years. There are about 500 acres of land located about 4 blocks over the District line in the zone of the new South Capitol st. Bridge. This bridge is operating now with a capacity of 50,000 automobiles daily. This bridge brings our property within 12 minutes of the heart of Washington. If you ride to the D. C. line stop your car a moment and look ahead and see a big woods. That's this 500 acres. If you look to the right and look to the left you'll observe about 100 million dollars worth of apartments and homes building right up to our property. Of this 500 acres we have already sold 100 acres. The remaining 400 you can have for $3000 an acre . . . and most of this property will be commercial and shopping centers. To give you an idea of what shopping centers are worth: On the Virginia end of the bridges it is worth about $500,000 an acre. Do you want to see what benefits the development of land can do for a neighborhood? Well, I built Chevy Chase, D. C., when that was all woods. I paid $600,000 for 400 acres. Now 1 acre of that same land at McKinley st. and Connecticut ave. is worth more than I paid for the 400 acres. I bought this 500 acres S. E. for $500 an acre 20 years ago, expecting this bridge to be built much sooner than it was built. Now there is no guessing. The bridge is built and in operation. You ought to make 20 million dollars there in a few years.

I'm in my 83rd year and I'm settling my own estate and I'm turning this over to a young man. This is a young man's job. Very small amount of cash payment will handle this, provided you have good credit and have faith in yourself and faith in the growth of Washington.

FLOWERS BY WIRE—TO THOSE WHO ARE NOT NEAR

Look in the Book by Bell
"Wong" numbers were common here!
Up until 1949, residents of San Francisco's Chinatown used the only "hand-painted" telephone directory in America. The names, addresses and numbers of more than 2,000 subscribers were listed there in Chinese characters which had to be lettered by hand, then photographed and printed. Now Chinatown has switched to dial service and the familiar "Day huey bin shi ah?" ("Number, please?") is a thing of the past.

You'll find the right number here!
To find exactly what you want to buy and where to buy it, simply look in the YELLOW PAGES, your Classified Telephone Directory. In addition to the regular listings of the businesses you're interested in, you'll find the answers to such questions as "How near are they located?" "What brands do they carry?" "When can I get delivery?" "What hours are they open?" and other equally helpful information. To save time and wasted calls, always look in the book.

"Berlin Command"

Reds Commit Error in Ignoring Airlift Potentials

By Brigadier General Frank Howley

This is the ninth of 12 articles taken from the new book, "Berlin Command," which will be run daily in The Washington Post. The author, Brig. Gen. Frank Howley, battled the Russians for four years, after 1945 to 1949, as deputy commander and then commander of American forces in Berlin.

MY FOURTH and last winter in Berlin was approaching. There is nothing poetic about Berlin winters.

The city lies as far north as Labrador, and the weather becomes quite as bitter. Each fall brought the threat of another food crisis, contingent upon the weather and the bare adequacy of the ration the population was receiving.

We had survived two mild winters and one severe season, in 1947—during that terrible time two thousand Germans froze to death.

And that was in the relatively carefree days before the blockade, when trainloads of food came into Berlin regularly. What would happen if the coming months proved severe, now that we were reduced to the meager limits of "Operation Vittles?"

Two signs were encouraging. The Germans were standing up well under the siege, and the airlift was developing so rapidly that within the next few months we could look toward greater tonnages—six, seven, perhaps eight thousands tons a day.

Those valiant old carriers, the C-47's, that had rushed to our aid in the early days of our need, were withdrawn. From Western Germany came C-54's, four-engine planes with a pay load of 10 tons.

The British also brought in bigger planes. Tudors and Yorks, almost the size of ours, and began developing tanker planes to bring in gasoline, kerosene, and Diesel oil in bulk.

Every load that hit the ground meant another hole in the Russian stockade around Berlin and another assurance of survival. As a demonstration of our capacity and our resources, 897 airlift flights were flown on Air Force Day, September 18, 1948, while Berliners still seethed against the Communists for driving out the elected city government.

Reds Realize Error

BY THAT TIME, the Russians had realized the mistake they had made in their calculations when they overlooked airlift possibilities.

Russian Yak fighters started buzzing transport planes. The first airlift casualty was a collision between a transport and a Russian fighter. On occasion, the Russians warned us ahead of air maneuvers involving our corridors, but nothing deterred us from maintaining our regular schedules.

All these airlift performances added up to a magnificent total, but conditions still were grim in the Western sectors. By careful economy and allocation, we managed an average ration of 1790 calories a day. We had to keep our fingers constantly on the pulse of the patient, and at the same time keep a watchful eye on his diet.

Deliveries were so arranged that we wouldn't have to dig into our reserves, except in case of extreme necessity. Common prudence dictated our policy, and the economics of the situation endorsed it. Berliners couldn't be said to be living; they were subsisting doggedly until better times came.

As commandant of the American sector, and as the man whose name stood at the top of the first page of the Russian blacklist, I couldn't hope to escape special Russian attention.

My house in Gelferstrasse was a regular Russian target. I used to get strange telephone calls late at night designed to break my rest and keep my nerves jangled. Sometimes a strange voice out of the void would advise me to get out of Berlin, more often there was only silence when I picked up the receiver.

Stationed Guard

MY DOORBELL rang at the most extraordinary hours, but there was no one there when we answered. Originally, I had no guard outside our house, but I put one on later.

All this unpleasantness was part of a terrorist campaign against me personally. I tried to keep this fact in mind when they woke me at 3 a. m. with an anonymous phone call.

With me in Berlin were Edith, my wife, and our four children. It was necessary that they stick it out, if for no other reason than to serve as a symbol of American determination not to be driven from Berlin.

The Germans understandably would have been unnerved if top-ranking American families had suddenly started to pull out.

As it was, the Russians announced periodically that Edith had become panic stricken and was leaving, but she never budged, although there were times when both of us wished fervently that she could take the children and get out of Berlin.

"You know we don't stand a chance if the Russians come in," I reminded her one day. "I'll be killed and you know what will happen to you."

Edith herself put it all in the proper cold light when she replied, a little fearfully, "If anything happens, Frank, the Russians will throw me to the regiment."

We weren't being melodramatic; there was no guarantee that the Russians would not turn to force. Long before the blockade, I had slept with a pistol under my pillow, and the blockade only intensified my apprehensions of the ultimate intention of the Russians—if everything else failed.

Force Big Factor

FORCE was a factor in which they had never lost faith.

The East-West split in the city government caused us many excursions and alarms, indicating the combustible nature of the situation. One of these incidents was the subject of a sharp disagreement I had with General Clay.

We received word that the Russians and the Communists were planning a big rally of supporters to march into the American and British sectors, their ostensible errand being to present a petition to the Allied Control Authority.

Our undercover men in Communist organizations tipped us off and provided us with an order issued to the Soviet police to slip into our sector and make one hundred arrests during the excitement and confusion of the parade.

We actually did arrest two of the ringleaders, armed with pistols, and carrying all the evidence we needed. Provided the Russians could assemble enough supporters, here was a direct threat to the American and British sectors.

Coordinating our plans with the British, we decided to block the bridges across Teltow Canal, which parallels the two sectors, and the two railroad bridges, using fire hoses and possibly tear gas.

The British would follow the same plan, but would allow the leaders to cross before restraining the rest of the crowd, which would enable them to arrest at least a hundred key men. We would allow a delegation, not exceeding 20, to proceed to the ACA.

Clay Rejects Plan

I EXPLAINED the plan to Major General Hays and our Chief of Staff, both of whom approved. Then I was called in by Clay, and I also explained the plan to him. Clay rejected it, and instructed me to let the crowd into our sector and allow them to march to the ACA building, but not to enter it.

"It is my belief that the right of petition is basic," he explained. "It would be undemocratic to handle the matter in the way you suggest."

All I could do under the circumstances was to put my view before him in the most forceful manner possible, pointing out that, if we got that anticipated mob in our sector, we would have great difficulty holding it without using much more effective weapons than fire hoses and tear gas.

The Russians had drummed up a crowd of seventy-five thousand for the dress rehearsal, and they had been harangued by no less a personage than a Russian colonel. But Clay was adamant.

Fortunately for us, the big parade fizzled out. Only a small number of troublemakers turned up for the demonstration, and the march to the ACA building failed to materialize. I had already canceled precautionary measures in the American sector but the British, being informed of what I had done under orders, stood fast—just in case.

Chrysler Strikers Ask Relief at Rate Of 800 Daily

Detroit, Feb. 12 (AP).—Chrysler strikers have started applying for relief at the rate of about 800 a day, the Detroit Welfare Department reported today.

The 19-day-old strike has idled 89,000 Chrysler production workers besides 40,000 workers in supplier plants. About 79,000 of the Chrysler workers on strike were employed in 14 Detroit plants.

Only 16 strikers have actually been put on relief rolls, Welfare Supt. Daniel J. Ryan said. Others have been given emergency food orders pending approval of their applications for relief.

Peace talks between Chrysler Corp. and the CIO United Auto Workers will resume Monday.

TV Talk for Ad Club

Melvin L. Gold, president of the National Television Film Council, will address the Advertising Club of Washington at its luncheon Tuesday at 12:30 p. m. in the Statler. He will present films recently prepared for television showing.

Too Little Time

I have so many genial friends . . . And yet it seems that we . . . Too seldom find the time to share . . . Each other's company . . . We do not get together for . . . Those visits of the heart . . . Because our work of weariness . . . Is keeping us apart . . . Or else there is an illness or . . . Some travel out of town . . . Or problems that envelop us . . . And sort of get us down . . . And so the days and weeks go by . . . Without a social call . . . And even months will disappear . . . With no hello at all . . . And that is why each time I see . . . A fond, familiar face . . . I wish this world were not so fast . . . And such a busy place.

Count the letters in your first name. Subtract four if the number is six or more. Add three if the number is less than six. Then you have the key number. Check each key number left to right. The letters under the checks form a message.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Might As Well Dress The Part

It was a tense moment in a bridge game at one of our better known clubs. The defenders pounced on the last trick, and the contract was down one, doubled.

"You certainly made a mess of that one," snapped the dummy. "You should have made an over-trick."

"Is that so," growled the declarer. "How would you have played the hand if you had been me?"

"Dressed in a butcher's apron," came the devastating reply.

WORTHY CAUSE

Bill Houston of 4015 71st ave., Landover Hills, Md., has a suggestion for Capital Transit.

"When they get their fare increase," he says, "they ought to set aside a small portion of the revenues for a school for operators. In that school they could teach:

"1. That bus drivers should not pull in to the curb at a 45-degree angle, thereby blocking two lanes of traffic.

"2. That no amount of ding-donging a streetcar bell will cause a motorist to drive through a red light to get out of the car's way.

"3. That slamming the door shut and starting across an intersection after the light has already turned yellow is a mighty dangerous practice."

TWO FIRSTS

A framed "first" dollar bill in a store or restaurant is nothing new, but the Oyster Bay, at 904 9th st. nw., enlarges on the tradition.

Two framed dollars grace its walls, both identified as the "first" spent there by customers.

Of course I had to get an explanation. Johnny Skouzes thought I should have been smart enough to figure it out for myself. "This one is the first food dollar," he said, "and the other one is the first dollar spent at the bar, after we got our liquor license."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

The Vocational Rehabilitation Service provides help for crippled adults. But is there any public group equipped to treat a spastically paralyzed child, or to help defray the cost of such treatment for a child? J. B. S.

Dear J. B. S.:

Indeed there is. Call National 6000 and ask for Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, director of the Health Department's Bureau of Maternal and Child Welfare.

The bureau is equipped to work with any crippled child (up to the age of 21) in the District, including treatment for such diseases as polio, cerebral palsy, and similar afflictions.

Not every child can be helped. It depends on the individual case. But the service is there, and details can be gotten from Dr. Oppenheimer. Bill.

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. Helen Solorzano, 822 4th st. ne.: Yes, some of the boys get testy at times, but most of our cops are pretty nice Joes, with a good sense of humor. The last time I paid a parking ticket, the station clerk entered my vital statistics in his huge ledger without a sign of recognition, but wound up asking: "Can you read and write?" He tried to play the gag straight, but couldn't quite make it, and we both had a good laugh.

G. Gross, 13202 Ardennes ave., Rockville, Md.: The city editor says it's a good idea, and thanks. He's assigning a reporter to the story.

Mrs. John G. Crommelin, 1513 30th st. nw.: Thanks for the nice note.

J. H. Gavin, Arlington, Va.: I can't use the puzzle you sent in, because I don't have enough room to reproduce the geometric figures involved. What's more, I can't catch the fallacy, unless it's that point "Q" in your sketch, if accurately drawn, would fall outside line FC, rather than inside it. Is that it?

PUN FUN

Gretchen Hood of 1226 Fairmont st. nw. passes along a wonderful pun snitched from a radio program.

The female commentator was talking about "clothes for the bride" at some length, and when her male stooge finally had an opportunity to get a word in edgewise, he quipped:

"Oh, yes indeed. It is extremely important for a bride to be well-groomed."

NEW PROGRAM DIRECTOR

G. R. Simcox of 262 N. Barton st., Arlington, Va., has an ingenious solution to the Government's headaches resulting from a farm subsidy program which is piling up mountains of unwanted potatoes and eggs.

Let the Federal Communications Commission take over the Agriculture Department. The FCC is against give-away programs.

ADD SIGNS

Beauty parlor sign, reported by David Kandel of 1216 New York ave. nw.

"If your hair isn't becoming to you, you should be coming to us."

SUSIE Q.

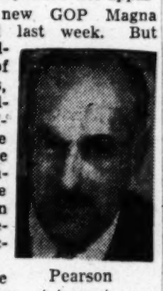
Closed-Door GOP Caucus Aired

By Drew Pearson

The basic differences inside the Republican Party were not apparent in the new GOP Magna Charta issued last week. But during a closed-door caucus of GOP Senators, there developed a significant cleavage which will have to be reconciled before the party can win any resounding victories.



When the Pearson proposed policy statement was first presented to the private meeting, Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine complained that part of the statement had already been broadcast by Drew Pearson, so it was urged that the Senators keep further details from "leaking to Pearson." However, here is a brief summary of what happened:

Although nearly every Senator had his own ideas on what the policy statement should say, it was Brewster of Maine and Taft of Ohio who engineered the final compromise.

"If you agree with 80 percent of the statement, that is as much as anyone can expect," argued Brewster. "We can't draft a statement that will suit everyone perfectly."

The "Young Turks," however, demurred. Their sharpest spokesman was Vermont's stocky George Aiken who objected to the slogan, "Liberty Against Socialism" and urged instead, "Liberty Against Totalitarianism."

"These are costly statements you are making," he warned.

Aiken also condemned the "weak and vacillating" stand on civil rights, and criticized the implied indorsement of high tariffs. But his loudest protest was over the statement on farm policy.

"Drew Pearson says the Republicans are coming around to the Brannan Plan," taunted Aiken, then proceeded to criticize the GOP's equivocal stand on cooperatives and failure to indorse the Rural Electrification Administration. Aiken's support of REA was so vigorously backed up by Senators McCarthy of Wisconsin, Watkins of Utah and Young of North Dakota that the GOP policy drafters agreed to insert REA in the Magna Charta.

Old Skeletons

Joining Aiken was Massachusetts' cultured Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., who objected vigorously to digging up the old skeletons of Yalta and Potsdam in order to criticize Democratic foreign policy.

"This looks backward when we ought to be looking ahead," objected Lodge.

Senators Ives of New York and Smith of Maine also lined up with the "Young Turks," but when the question of adopting the policy statement was finally put to a voice vote, only seven or eight shouted "no."

Remarked Senator Aiken afterward: "This is a great day for the Democrats."

Air vs. Oratory

Irate Secretary of Air Stuart Symington spotted Undersecretary of Defense Steve Early at a Washington cocktail party.

Just a few days before, their Boss, Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson had made a blood and thunder "we-can-lick-the-Russians-at-5-a. m." speech, while almost simultaneously Symington was telling another audience about our inadequate air defenses.

So, at the cocktail party, Symington demanded bluntly of Steve Early, who is the great pacifier of the Pentagon: "What in hell is this all about? I thought we were all together on policy. Then Louis gives this speech that makes me look like a fool."

Atomic Secrets

It didn't leak out of that super-secret meeting of the Congressional Atomic Committee, but Gen. Leslie Groves, wartime boss of the Manhattan Project, indirectly tried to pin the blame on President Roosevelt for atomic leaks to Russia.

Groves contended that the leaks wouldn't have occurred if FDR had followed his advice and insisted on a tighter screening of British and American scientists working on the A-bomb.
